Written By The Right Hand Book Cover and a start to this content and the *Cuba Mafia Pamphlet

The book includes extensive citations pushing the bounds of fair-use of existing works in a new necessary work that considers the bulk of the available literature is well researched and important to include in this survey of that literature viewed together. In addition the story of my own family is integrated into that fabric of history.

The Right Hand Operatives of the Cabal and the Dangerous Job They Undertook of Exposing its Secrets

By Edward Paul Donegan integrating the fabric of history in their interlocking corroborating tell-alls and integrating in the Donegan family history as well. Similar to Chuck Giancana and St. John Hunt I have been in a family closely tied to events but until know it has been a missing piece central to but not visibly revealed in the entire puzzle.

The Donegan family story contains central information so secret and covered up for so long no one even knows to look for it

The Pie Slices of the existing understanding are growing deeper with more information released but whole slices are missing and the Donegan family story contains the missing slices not even being looked for.

The Well Documented Pieces of the Pie [and the unknown part of those]

1. The Oil, Diamond, Coffee, and Banana Colonialism: Big business had long used oppressive techniques in the counries they entered for natural resources. Their justification was tough-love theory. They would impose Western values on savages with little understanding of the social system they would be groomed into.

2. Nazism and Cold War Communism: The success of the Nazi War Machine and a nuclear capable space race capable China and Russia terrified Western nations.

3. Subversion and Overthrows: The Oil Business in Operation 40 and other programs hired mercenaries from the Mafia to assassinate.

4. Rockefeller Republicans: The Walker family, Rockefeller Family, Bush family, Nixon, Cheney, and others were part of the Globalism plot as was LBJ, The Hearst family, and many more.

Managed Expectations Theory of MK-Ultra

Jen Moore is a fellow truth teller of this.

5. The Kings Speech 1925: Prince Albert had a genetic defect called Minimal Brain Disorder. FOXP2 is similar to ADHD and includes symptoms like Borderline Personality Disorder, Disgraphia, poor written grammar and conjugation, poor regulation of the throat and digestive system. As a child it was recognized in Albert. In his speech of 1925 it was obvious. "Truth To Tell: Tell It Early, Tell It All, Tell It Yourself" by Lanny Davis is the goto guide on scandal handling. As Nazis demanded perfection the British increased their loyalty to a 1936 King who had shown some imperfection. In 1936 Prince Albert replaced the Nazi sympathizer King Edward VIII and George VI was nearly dead in late 1951. His daughter Princess Elizabeth (QEII not the Queen Mother) and the CIA began plans around the world.

6. Control Expectations of the Children:Bastard Children were secretlty placed in the USA and around the world. Living under flase identities Marilyn Monroe and others were watched for developmental progress.

7. Sleeper Agents: Some who showed no signs of the disease were told they were lost relatives seperated at birth from the noble origins. They were encouraged to be placed into families around the world and recieve CIA backing to become Sleeper Agents and Agents of Influence.

8. Illegal CIA and British Programs: It is considered bad planning to assasinate or bring down one leader of the next leader's identity is not assured and desirable. Placing these Sleeper in line for places like Indonesia or perhaps Kenya was part of the planning of placing hidden identity children around the world.

9. Orphanages: This is where the children were watched and testing. This included McMartin Preschool and Boystown Franklin Nebraska. Ted Gunderson, William Colby, and John DeCamp all CIA agents knew the CIA was involve din these schools and hiding the secrets of these schools.

   For more information on McMartin and Franlin Nebraska Child Abuse Alletations see

10. Birther: Ed Donegan asserts he was born to hidden identiy Glorian Donegan and he (myself) and Glorian had the gene expressed. Ed Donegan asserts Barrack Obama Jr. was born in Los Angeles County Inglewood hospital in an IVF experiment and the Kennedy's were aware of it, participating, then were repulsed by the unfolding details and actions. This led to the USAID plans at risk and JFK and RFK were silenced.

Inslaw and PROMISE

I Edward Paul Donegan believe and I believe Daniel Casolaro believed the OCTOPUS United Fruit Compnay CIA plans tied to Latin American and other programs was something intertwined with PROMISE software that law enforcement including US DOD would have access too. Monoclonal Antibodies tracking capability I think may have been a threat to secret clones (really half brothers, half sisters, etc.,) of elites of US and British families might have been fouind including in some of the presidents of the USA including the Bush family and Obama family and Nixon family.

https://em360tech.com/tech-articles/what-inslaw-affair-deep-dive-octopus For years, the case has captivated those who have examined every detail or followed the mysterious fate of investigative journalist Danny Casolaro, who met his tragic end shortly after investigating its depths. But what really happened in the Inslaw case, and why does it continue to enthral the public years after the original scandal?

In this article, we'll examine the case, shedding light on the allegations of government misconduct using PROMIS and the Octopus conspiracy theory.

What is Inslaw?

Inslaw, Inc. is a software company that gained significant attention in the 1980s due to its legal battles with the United States (US) government.

The company developed a case management software named PROMIS, which was initially designed to manage US caseloads efficiently.

Originally funded by a government grant in the 1970s, the development of PROMIS brought it into the public domain, making it free for use. Edwin Meese, a notable figure of the time, expressed great enthusiasm for PROMIS, which was advertised as revolutionary for law enforcement.

This sentiment culminated in a substantial contract worth $9.6 million awarded to Inslaw by the US Department of Justice (DOJ) in March 1982.

The goal? To implement the public domain version of PROMIS in select US Attorney's offices as a pilot programme, with the potential for expansion to federal prosecutors' offices nationwide.

History PROMIS Software PROMIS, an acronym for Prosecutor's Management Information System, revolutionised legal case management with its comprehensive suite of tools developed by Inslaw.

The software emerged as a legal game-changer, providing prosecutors and law enforcement agencies with a powerful toolset to streamline case management.

While PROMIS was not the first database management system ever created, it represented a significant advancement in the field, particularly within the legal domain.

what is promis software

The software stood out for its specific focus on case management and its advanced capabilities tailored to the needs of prosecutors and legal professionals.

It introduced innovative features for its time, such as the ability to track legal proceedings, manage caseloads, and facilitate information sharing within legal departments. It also offered sophisticated document management functionalities, empowering users to organise, store, and retrieve case-related documents easily.

At its core, PROMIS provided a centralised repository for critical information, facilitating collaboration and information sharing among teams from initiation to resolution.

What is the Inslaw Affair? The narrative surrounding PROMIS took a controversial turn when Inslaw accused the DOJ of illegally modifying the software.

Illegations suggested that the DOJ had implemented unauthorised changes, including backdoor functionalities, enabling covert surveillance and intelligence gathering.

According to Inslaw, the DOJ had unlawfully altered the software and disseminated it to numerous government entities and foreign intelligence agencies without authorisation.Such allegations sparked a lengthy legal battle between the company and the DOJ, which denied any wrongdoing.

However, investigations and subsequent court proceedings unearthed evidence supporting Inslaw's claims, including testimonies from former DOJ employees. -https://em360tech.com/tech-articles/what-inslaw-affair-deep-dive-octopus

Chauncey Marvin Holt who worked with Sam "Mooney" Giancana under William King Harvey

"Only the truth will put the past to rest." (Picture of John and Jackie Kennedy in Dallas) -Self Portrait of a Scoundrel Eight days before he slipped into death. Chauncey Marvin Holt

Sam "Mooney" Giancana (aks Sam Gold) who worked with Chauncey Holt under William King Harvey

Introduction to book by its Giancana family authors

Although most Americans have known little up until now about Sam Giancana's impact on the nation, it's precisely this lack of knowledge that has made writing Double Cross so necessary. Tired of the blatant misinformation and inaccuracies that have continued to be reported on topics ranging from the St. Valentine's Day Massacre to the death of Marilyn Monroe and the assassination of John F. Kennedy, we decided it was time, once and for all, to tell the story of these events as Sam Giancana related it. The resulting revelations contained in Double Cross, although shocking, speak for themselves.

Thus, we now present what was confided to Chuck Giancana by his brother Sam Giancana as the truth of the times. It should be added that we do so with much sadness and no small measure of fear. This is a sordid and difficult legacy-and one we did not choose.

It's therefore our desire that, after completing the book, the reader will not find those bearing the Giancana name guilty, by association, with a man who so destructively changed the course of history. We do believe there may yet be a positive outcome to the saga told here. Once armed with a truer account of our nation's past, the reader-no longer enslaved by an apathy borne of falsehood-may possess a renewed ability to affect America's future. And, in the final analysis, that may be what Double Cross is all about. Perhaps the reader, like these authors, will conclude that the ultimate double cross was not perpetrated against one individual but was, more significantly, committed against the people of this nation and the citizens of the world. -SAMUEL M. GIANCANA CHUCK GIANCANA August 1991

The last concluding words of the book (referencing Spooks Hoods and the Hidden Elites)

Roselli's disclosures, involving the Mafia-CIA efforts in the Bay of Pigs and the Castro assassination attempt, demonstrated that he was a man who certainly knew too much. Perhaps he was also the one man who could implicate Trafficante and the CIA in the murder of Mooney Giancana, and, even more damning, in the assassination of the President of the United States and his presidential-hopeful brother.

Roselli's testimony and murder soon after prompted the formation of the U.S. House Select Committee on Assassinations and the reopening of investigations into the death of the President. Curiously, Trafficante did appear before both Senate committees but, quite unlike Mooney and Roselli, experienced no ill aftereffects.

More deaths were to follow Mooney's and Roselli's-some more suspicious than others.

Chuckie Nicoletti was murdered in 1977, immediately after the U.S. House Select Committee on Assassinations determined he would be called for questioning. His demise was chalked up as just one more Mob hit, although some committee members evidently suspected differently.

George De Morhenchildt was also scheduled to testify before the U.S. House Select Committee on Assassinations in 1977 and died on the very day he was to be questioned regarding the President's murder. Despite the coincidental nature of his death, it was ruled a suicide.

The list went on. Filled with names familiar-Jack Ruby, David Ferrie, Guy Banister-and not so familiar.

For a serious student of history, there is good reason to pause at Mooney's saga of corruption. There is also good reason to question whether such immorality continues to exist in this country, reaching into our nation's highest office.

Sadly, it may very well be that this is, indeed, the case. To whit: the Pentagon Papers; Richard Nixon's Watergate; the Vatican bank scandal; the Iran-Contra affair; the graft and CIA involvement in the case of the Philippines's Ferdinand and Imelda Marcos; the Manuel Noriega-CIA connection in Panama, and BCCI. All bits and pieces perhaps of a much larger and more sinister puzzle. But all bearing the stamp of the CIA's entanglement with organized crime.

Most of those who were involved in the 1963 assassination of President John F. Kennedy have been murdered. Some have committed "suicide" or spent their final days in prison, while others still linger behind bars. There are some men, however, if we are to believe Mooney's tales of Mafia-CIA counterintelligence activities, who've prospered and remained free. Amassing incredible power from careers deeply rooted in the CIA, these men have reached America's loftiest positions of authority, from which they continue to influence world events.

Hits ordered on Marilyn Monroe then JFK by the Mafia assigned and armed to kill Castro by the CIA

"Marilyn Monroe was killed by drugs administered by thugs. Failure to salve that crime put JFK next in line https://youtu.be/0vHOcTO3rmc?si=zrDTiZjd8lADNimm&t=4008. That is text taken from a longer poem written by Bill Truels who had three insights into the Deep State. As Greek in Chicago he knew the story of Eugenia Becca "Becca" Pappas. Birth: 1944. Illinois, USA. Death: 1962 (aged 17-18). Chicago, Cook County, Illinois, USA. She had heard and repeated mobsters working for Sam Giancana left Chicago to fly to California to kill Marilyn Monroe. Becca was killed inh er car by mobsters shortly thereafter and was found floating in the Chicago river.

Here is the Modus Operandi the mob used on Monroe. Chloral Hydrate and Nembutal were using in combination and delivered rectally. I Edward Paul Doegan suspect this barbiturate death was used as a toxic weapon on Dorothy Kilgallen too. The combination of these know-out drugs works in a way similar to the three drug protocol of lethal injections. The drugs both suppress muscle reactions and convulsions along with muscle activitis of the cardio pulmanary (heart and lung) system.

Chloral hydrate is a geminal diol with the formula $Cl_3C{-}CH(OH)_2$. It was first used as a sedative and hypnotic in Germany in the 1870s. Over time it was replaced by safer and more effective alternatives but it remained in usage in the United States until at least the 1970s. Acute overdosage is often characterized by nausea, vomiting, confusion, convulsions, slow and irregular breathing, cardiac arrhythmia, and coma. The plasma, serum or blood concentrations of chloral hydrate and/or trichloroethanol, its major active metabolite, may be measured to confirm a diagnosis of poisoning in hospitalized patients or to aid in the forensic investigation of fatalities. It was the first of a long line of sedatives, most notably the barbiturates, manufactured and marketed by the German pharmaceutical industry.[30] Historically, chloral hydrate was utilized primarily as a psychiatric medication. In 1869, German physician and pharmacologist Oscar Liebreich began to promote its use to calm anxiety, especially when it caused insomnia. Chloral hydrate had certain advantages over morphine for this application, as it worked quickly without injection and had a consistent strength. Chloral hydrate inhibits liver alcohol dehydrogenase in vitro (in the living body). [And barbituates along too?] This could be an explanation of the synergeric effect seen with alcohol. Alcohol dehydrogenases (ADH) is explained. In humans and many other animals, they serve to break down alcohols that are otherwise toxic/

Pentobarbital (US) or pentobarbitone (British and Australian) [Nebmutal] is a short-acting barbiturate typically used as a sedative, a preanesthetic, and to control convulsions in emergencies.

There is name for the template used by J. Edgar Hoover for cover-ups of mob hits of politicians and it is seen by himself and others in a string of assassinations by the FBI backed mobsters that include disappearing investigatory files, corrupt elements of policing within LAPD and other agencies, and the political connections of the mobster linked to the crimes insulating the criminals.

https://www.uticaod.com/story/business/transportation/2012/08/01/marilyn-monroe-mystery-where-are/45085270007/ There have been two major government investigations into Monroe's demise - the original inquiry immediately after her death and another effort by the Los Angeles District Attorney's Office in 1982. The second inquiry, released in December 1982, reviewed all files available investigative reports, including files compiled by the FBI on her death. The records, the DA's office noted, were "heavily censored."

That mention intrigued the man who performed Monroe's autopsy, Dr. Thomas Noguchi. While the DA investigation concluded he conducted a thorough autopsy, Noguchi has conceded that no one will likely ever know all the details of Monroe's death. The FBI files and confidential interviews conducted with the actress' friends that have never been made public might help, he wrote in his 1983 memoir "Coroner."

"On the basis of my own involvement in the case, beginning with the autopsy, I would call Monroe's suicide 'very probable,"' Noguchi wrote. "But I also believe that until the complete FBI files are made public and the notes and interviews of the suicide panel released, controversy will continue to swirl around her death."

While the police files remain emptied on the case of JFK RFK Marilyn Monroe and others the deeath bed confessions of the killers working for the CIA who can and do explain the still remaining questions are piling up. It was the Mafia run by the FBI and CIA and when the Mafia acted the police did not.

Jen Moore another truth teller notes that there were "two competing philosophies" that lead to the JFK assassination that was lead by Allen Dulles and others. Great Britain used the "Tilt" system of "leverage" that illegally and often with bloody methods altered by covert means the desitiny of a nation and its form of government. Imposing a Western allegiance while violating Western laws was illegal but seen as necessary preemption of the greater evil of losing satelite nations to hostile governments.

I Ed Donegan reading many Illuminati site data think I have found a key meeing when the USA caved into this method of Great Britain that occured under Eisenhower. In 1951, Duke Edward produced a memoir, A King's Story ghost-written by Charles Murphy, in which he expressed disagreement with liberal politics. The royalties from the book added to Edward and Wallis's income. In 1955, the couple visited President Dwight D. Eisenhower at the White House. And also on 4 April of 1956 President Richard Nixon invited them as guests of honour to a dinner at the White House with Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, Charles Lindbergh, Alice Roosevelt Longworth, Arnold Palmer, George H. W. Bush, and Frank Borman.

This group of people will be connected to The Special Relationship with Great Britain, its methods, and its goals, and its illegalities JFK and RFK wished to stop and Marilyn Monroe was about to leak. I will add this statement in. George H.W. Bush should never have been the mouse gaurding the cheese at the CIA and should never have been vice president, president, or the father of a US President. Nor should have LBJ or Richard Nixon been any of those things including Vice President Richard Nixon being the effective control of the DNI as National Security Council Chair while Vice President nor later President of the USA after RFK is assasinated by Nixon's own mafi just as JFK had been.

Double Cross by the Giancana family- In exchange for his underworld services, Mooney said the CIA looked the other way- allowing over $100 million a year in illicit drugs to flow through Havana into the United States.

It was an arrangement similar to all the rest they'd made, he said. The CIA received IO percent of the take on the sale of the narcotics, which they utilized "for their undercover slush fund." Such illegally earned monies were stashed away by the CIA in Swiss, Italian, Bahamian, and Panamanian accounts.- The Giancana book Doublecross Chapter 17

A group of CIA contract agents operating at least since 1951 and 1954 (most likely formalized in 1946 as a Marshall Plan component under Nixon who recruited Jack Ruby about that time) began interviewing covertly in the Dominican Republic, Guatemala, Iran, Latin America, and elsewhere.

Ties to businesses like United Fruit Company, the Vatican as a Spy Agency, Vatican Bank, James Jesus Angleton, Will Bill Donovan CD Douglas, and others formed ties with prohibition muscle, also used for strikebreaking tough-guys inside the USA.

Chauncey Marvin Holt tells much of this history and who this led into the JFK assassination in his books.

Chauncey Holt is the accountant and bookkeeper for Meyer Lansky (born Maier Suchowljansk) of the Bugsy Lanksy Mob, Bugsey later killed. These are Murder Inc., and have ties to Batista. The CIA will invite them and Ruby to overthrow Castro

A member of the Jewish mob, Lansky developed a gambling empire that stretched around the world. He was said to own points (percentages) in casinos in Las Vegas, Cuba, Miami, and New Orleans. Lansky had a strong influence with the Italian-American Mafia. He played a large role in the consolidation of the criminal underworld by introducing money laundering and offshore banking in 1932, used in the 1950s for cash from the heroin trade. The full extent of this role has been the subject of some debate, as Lansky himself denied many of the accusations against him. - Wikipedia.

World War II involvement, 1938-1945

In the 1930s, Lansky and his gang stepped outside their usual criminal activities to break up rallies held by the pro-Nazi German-American Bund. He recalled a particular rally in Yorkville, a German neighborhood in Manhattan, that he and fourteen other associates disrupted:

> The stage was decorated with a swastika and a picture of Adolf Hitler. The speakers started ranting. There were only fifteen of us, but we went into action. We threw some of them out the windows. Most of the Nazis panicked and ran out. We chased them and beat them up. We wanted to show them that Jews would not always sit back and accept insults.

When Judge Nathan D. Perlman offered to pay Lansky for his services, he declined:

> I am a Jew, and I feel for the Jews in Europe who are suffering. They are my brothers.

During World War II, Lansky was also instrumental in helping the Office of Naval Intelligence (ONI)'s Operation Underworld, in which the government recruited criminals to watch out for German infiltrators and submarine-borne saboteurs. Lansky helped arrange a deal with the government via a high-ranking United States Navy official. This deal secured the release of Luciano from prison; in exchange, the Mafia would provide security for the warships that were being built along the docks in New York Harbor. German submarines were sinking Allied ships in great numbers along the eastern seaboard and the Caribbean coast, and there was great fear of attack or sabotage by Nazi sympathizers. Lansky connected the ONI with Luciano, who reportedly instructed Joseph Lanza to prevent sabotage on the New York waterfront.

The Prohibition era was a period in the United States from 1920 to 1933 during which a nationwide constitutional law prohibiting the production, importation, transportation, and sale of alcoholic beverages was enacted.[1] The alcohol industry was curtailed by a succession of state legislatures, and finally ended nationwide under the Eighteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution, ratified on January 16, 1919. Prohibition ended with the ratification of the Twenty-first Amendment, which repealed the Eighteenth Amendment on December 5, 1933. Wikipedia

Batista initially rose to power as part of the 1933 Revolt of the Sergeants, which overthrew the provisional government of Carlos Manuel de Céspedes y Quesada. Batista then appointed himself chief of the armed forces, with the rank of colonel, and effectively controlled the five-member "pentarchy" that functioned as the collective head of state. He maintained control through a string of puppet presidents until 1940, when he was elected president on a populist platform.[3][4] He then instated the 1940 Constitution of Cuba[5] and served until 1944. After finishing his term, Batista moved to Florida, returning to Cuba to run for president in 1952. Facing certain electoral defeat, he led a military coup against President Carlos Prío Socarrás that pre-empted the election.

Back in power and receiving financial, military and logistical support from the United States government,[7][8] Batista suspended the 1940 Constitution and revoked most political liberties, including the right to strike. He then aligned with the wealthiest landowners who owned the largest sugar plantations, and presided over a stagnating economy that widened the gap between rich and poor Cubans.[9] Eventually, it reached the point where most of the sugar industry was in U.S. hands, and foreigners owned 70% of the arable land.[10] As such, Batista's repressive government then began to systematically profit from the exploitation of Cuba's commercial interests, by negotiating lucrative relationships both with the American Mafia, who controlled the drug, gambling, and prostitution businesses in Havana, and with large U.S.-based multinational companies who were awarded lucrative contracts.[9][11] To quell the growing discontent amongst the populace-which was subsequently displayed through frequent student riots and demonstrations-Batista established tighter censorship of the media, while also utilizing his Bureau for the Repression of Communist Activities secret police to carry out wide-scale violence, torture and public executions. These murders mounted in 1957, as socialist ideas became more influential. People were killed, with estimates ranging from hundreds to about 20,000 people killed.

These tactics ultimately failed to quell unrest and instead were the catalyst for more widespread resistance. For two years (December 1956 - December 1958) Fidel Castro's 26th of July Movement and other rebelling elements led an urban- and rural-based guerrilla uprising against Batista's government, which culminated in his eventual defeat by rebels under the command of Che Guevara at the Battle of Santa Clara on New Year's Day 1959. Batista immediately fled the island with an amassed personal fortune to the Dominican Republic, where strongman and previous military ally Rafael Trujillo held power. Batista eventually found political asylum in António Salazar's Portugal, where he first lived on the island of Madeira and then in Estoril. He was involved in business activities in Spain and was staying there in Guadalmina at the time of his death from a heart attack in 1973. - Wikipedia

Most likely the growers had a barrier to entry (being land owners) the farm workers did not, and farm hand could do, and businesses need the raw materials of distilling (sugar, etc.,) and paid little for them.

The Mafia in Cuba

> “We invented Havana, and we can goddamn well move it someplace else if Batista can’t control it.’ - Meyer Lansky in Sydney Pollack’s film ‘Havana”

The organised mafia in United States had initiated its activities in Cuba in the early 1920’s, running rum and other alcohol; but the creation of a criminal empire as such began toward the end of 1933, when the first arrangements were made between the recently promoted Colonel Batista and “the Mafia’s financier”, Meyer Lansky, on direct orders of the great Charles “Lucky” Luciano.

Operations were immediately organised under the supervision of four Mafia families directed by the Corsican Amleto Battisti y Lora, Amadeo Barletta Barletta, Santo Trafficante (father) and Meyer Lansky himself.

The Cocaine Era

Lucky Luciano had been using Cuba as a midway point between heroin sources and consumer markets in the US and the representative of these channels in Havana was Corsican Amleto Battisti Lora.

In the prologue to the book La nueva era (The New Era), in which Battisti theorizes about the economic strategy of his time, journalist Fernando de la Milla affirms that Don Amleto was a tall, thin, slender man, with an elegance contrived through sobriety, with only a stark ring on his finger, never a tiepin or even a watch on his wrist, Amleto Battisti, a slow speaker, always piercingly attentive of his interlocutor, with his shining crescent-shaped bald head, looks like a young French Foreign Minister or a lecturing professor of immaculate appearance - mimicking Bergson´s style - well-loved by feminine audiences. The suggestive image of his figure could be multiplied in atmospheres of courtesy, diplomacy, exclusive gatherings, artistic circles, in short, refinement. However, comparative imagination falls short in an attempt to somehow associate the appearance of the man with his specific activity.

In summary, that Amleto Battisti physically resembles anything except what he really is: a businessman. Neither his silhouette, apparently Gallic in style, the attention with which he listens, his imperturbable serenity, minimal gestures or constantly muffled voice suggest that his mind is a mind of numbers, of probabilities and risks, of profits and losses.

During the thirties, Battisti was occasionally seen in the company of the President of the Republic, and was well known and accepted as an important industrial businessman and financier. Later, despite that he was a foreigner involved in notorious mafia activities which were already common knowledge, he was granted parliamentary immunity by the Partido Liberal.

The Mafia found in Havana its safest link: if drugs reached the Cuban capital, they were virtually in the United States, transported through the active air and sea traffic. Not only were military airports used for these purposes but also private air strips owned by members of the Batista political-military hierarchy and followers of the Partido Autentico, located in increasingly numerous country estates purchased in the western provinces.

But above all, it should be noted that the cocaine era was introduced in Cuba by the US mafia thirty years before it became popular in the United States. The drug most extensively consumed then was heroin and the distribution of South American cocaine in US markets would pose an open challenge by mafia families in Havana to the interests of Lucky Luciano in the United States.

Politicians and Organized Crime

By the end of 1946, important meetings were also being held in the residence of former president Batista. Meanwhile, Grau was still intent on running for reelection, whilst the poorest sectors continued to endure unemployment, black market, privileges and larceny committed by the ruling Partido Authentico and its “democracy.” This is the moment when gangster groups involved in Cuban politics launched a McCarthyist repression through operations that acquired special dimensions against communists, progressive intellectuals, workers - trade unions - and peasant movements for the purpose of preventing unity among all the patriotic forces of the Cuban nation.

Behind this project conceived to oppose, divide and annihilate any revolutionary influence were the mafia and the US intelligence apparatus. Imperial concerns had not changed: they feared an insurrection that would rally the oppressed sectors of Cuban society which represented the majority of the population.

Both the special services and the mafia agreed that the apparent power of Grau and his clique would not last long. In fact, during its rise the Partido Autentico - Grau - had assumed many commitments, thus making it difficult to explain its alliances and connections with Machado and Batista’s followers, such as Aquilino Lombard and Guillermo Alonso Pujol. But of all the political stratagems that Grau was forced to enter, none was more incomprehensible to public opinion than the shady deal he struck with the man who would occupy the vice- presidency. An outsider - he was not a member of the Partido Autentico - and considered a fuming conservative. In 1922, he published a book denying the existence of US imperialism and justifying its policy of intervention in Cuba. He favored the Platt Amendment and his ideas had nothing to do with the political platform embraced by the leadership of the Partido Autentico when he was called to be part of the government.

As a result, Grau organised his cabinet in 1944 under the best auspices. He appointed Dr. Felix Lancis Sanchez Prime Minister, a person given to sinecures and absolute negligence. Another of his cabinet members was Dr. Segundo Curtis - the son of Italians living in Havana - who, in a gesture of extreme admiration, affirmed that Grau San Martin was the loftiest president in Cuban history. Doctor Curtis was appointed Minister of Interior. The position of Minister of Agriculture went to the owner of drugstores, ranches and other businesses in Camaguey, Dr. Alvarez Fuentes, host of Q Airlines flights at the Camaguey international airport. His drugstore was situated in the heart of the province's capital city and his success transcended the Caribbean Basin.

Scandals, Robbery and Frauds

Apart from other low passions, personal interests, settling of scores, vendettas, executions and countless criminal actions, Cuban McCarthyst gangster practices or gansterism represented an effective means of corruption that would be used mainly against the old Communist Party and the vigorous workers movement led by Lazaro Peña.

The organization of gangsterism also allowed Dr. Carlos Prio Socarras, first from the Ministry of Labor and later as Prime Minister, to glide into the presidency of the Republic, and a second term for the Partido Autentico, with a vice-president who responded entirely to General Batista's political-military faction. In a report to the National Auditing Office published by the press at the time, Fidel Castro, a young lawyer, accused President Prio for his close links with gangsterism:

[…] Prio is no stranger to dealing with gangs. They escorted him zealously throughout his political campaign. He assumed power overwhelmed with commitments.

[…] Thus, for example, apart from other smaller groups, Guillermo Comellas' group was given 60 positions; the Tribunal Ejemplar Revolucionario received 110; Union Insurreccional Revolucionaria, 120; Accion Guiteras, 150 positions; Colorado'a group, 400 positions; Masferrer, 500 positions and Policarpo's group, the most fearsome, 600 positions. This makes a total, according to data in my possession, of 2 120 positions which were being paid for services not rendered in the Ministries of Health, Labor, Interior and Public Works.

In some cases, the number of positions per person was alarming. Manuel Villa, for example, had thirty positions: Guillermo el Flaco ("Skinny") had 28 positions; Pepe "El Primo" (Cousin) had 26 positions; the "Boxer" (I do not know his name) had 26 positions, collected from payrolls or fees under different names.

The cars in which they commit these killings are paid by Prio.

The men who kill are supported by Prio.

[…] to conclude these lines written with utmost honesty and sincerity, I can only repeat the words of Jose Marti when he exhorted Cubans to the struggle: "For you, our homeland, the blood from the wounds of this world and the smiles of the martyrs as they fall. For you, our homeland, the sensible enthusiasm of your children, the satisfying pain of serving you, and the resolution of enduring to the very end!

At the Service of the Mafia

In 1951 - in a very general outline - the political forces in Cuba exhibited the following features:

A force established as a government - apparent power - in an unbridled process of corruption, with the three Prio Socarras brothers trying to give continuity to the Partido Autentico, through alliances with the Liberal, Democrat and Republican Parties, surrounded by numerous characters who hoped to inherit positions or carrying out covert operations, among them Manuel Antonio (Tony) de Varona, Miguel Suarez Fernandez, Hevia and the Jose and Eduardo Suarez Rivas brothers.

A second group - also an outgrowth from the Partido Autentico - headed by Dr. Grau San Martin who, from the opposition, expected once again to reach power positions with the use of his false 1944 image.
Grau had been encouraged to form a new party, which weakened the Partido Autentico block even more. In July 1951, Senator Santiaguito Rey Pernas was appointed Grau's right-hand man for the purpose of arousing contradictions and ambitions between Grau's and Prio's followers.

Money Laundery

On December 22, 1950, Dr. Felipe Pazos, President of Banco Nacional de Cuba, granted Don Amadeo Barletta Barletta License No. 62, which authorized him to convert Banco Internacional de La Habana (Havana International Bank) into Banco Atlantico S. A. (Atlantic Bank S.A.).

Henceforth, Banco Atlantico S. A. would have its offices on the ninth floor, at 16 Menocal Avenue (formerly Infanta) and later on 23rd and P Streets, in the heart of La Rampa district in the Vedado, in the same building occupied by General Motors, of which Barletta was also general manager.

Banco Atlantico commenced operations with the following executives: president: Don Amadeo Barletta Barletta; vice-president: Amadeo H. Barletta Jr. (Barlettica); secretary: Dr. Luis J. Botifill and general manager: Dr. Leonardo Masoni. From the onset, its operations were required by the functionaries of the Banco Nacional de Cuba, however the manipulations of that delinquent state were such that Banco Atlantico never encountered any problems, neither during Carlos Prio Socarras' term in office or later when Batista's tyrannical regime seized power.

The Great Tragedy

For a full understanding of the domination scheme imposed in Cuba after 1934 a study of the situation of Cuban economy is of particular importance. In this sense, a paper by Dr. Julio Le Riverend shows that already in 1932 an economic cycle had concluded; however, the great danger posed by an economy based

"[…] on sugar production in large amounts for export to a single country […]" remained. At the time, the Cuban nation had only an alternative: either to export more sugar to the United States or to produce domestically "[…] most of what was being imported […]".

The great tragedy Cubans faced was caused by the US domination of Cuba's economy. Due to its condition as a producer and exporter of a single commodity, it could not enter the international market. The country had nickel, which was occasionally exploited; it produced some tobacco and coffee, but depended entirely on its sugar production to satisfy its basic needs. It should be taken into account that up to fifty percent or more of the food Cubans consumed was imported from the United States. Even ice-cream, candy and flowers were imported.
The old single commodity economic structure - the sugar bowl of the world, inherited from colonialism - was particularly reinforced by US financial groups from the very beginning of the Protectorate. We would continue to produce and export a single commodity even after the 1920 and 1929 crises and became much more dependent after the formation of a state with a criminal background.

It is necessary to underline that this single-commodity economy was a virtual straightjacket that stifled most vital Cuban interests in the early fifties.

The Front Companies

The Havana Empire functioned as a gigantic corporation with many specialised departments. This differed significantly from the methods used by the Sicilian mafia when it began its activities in the United States. Illicit operations quickly began using the legal means provided by contemporary capitalism for organizing interests based on legislation, agreements, covers, etc., all very respectable. However, in recent years, the mafia in Havana not only depended on the initial power deployed by the families living in Cuba since 1934, the growth of businesses and contradictions with other US criminal groups promoted the entry of new ally forces.

Like the imperialist domination scheme itself, these families upheld the practice of multiple links for the organization, exploitation and control of businesses in Cuba.

The New Investors

On June 11, 1952, Dr. Joaquin Martinez Saenz, president of Banco Nacional de Cuba, received a notice requesting authorization to open Banco de La Habana. This bank would have its main branch in the town of Niquero, a municipality in Oriente province and also site of the Niquero, Media Luna and Cabo Cruz sugar mills. The Campechuela, San Ramon and Santa Rita sugar mills were also located in the neighboring municipalities, as well as other agricultural and commercial companies, where no banking entity had ever existed before.

According to the proposal made to Banco Nacional de Cuba, this bank would have a national character and its central office situated at 104-108 San Ignacio Street in Havana. The persons interested in the opening of the bank were Mr. Julio Lobo Olavarria, shareholder and director of the companies that owned Tinguaro, Escambray, Niquero, Cape Cruz, Caracas and other sugar mills, as well as the international trading house known as Galban Trading Company S. A., and a number of related companies; Mr. German S. Lopez Sanchez, shareholder and/or owner of the Santa Maria, El Pilar. Caracas, Najasa and Siboney sugar mills, member of the Cacicedo Bank in Cienfuegos and of trading and port companies in that city; Mr. Gregorio Escogedo Salmon, shareholder and/or director of the Fidencia, Perseverancia, El Pilar, Caracas, Najasa and Siboney sugar mills, livestock and rice companies.

The War Breaks Out

Lansky was convinced that war with the New York groups was inevitable and started to adopt a series of measures. The first of these precautions, in late 1956, was to feign his retirement from business, but instead he created a typical mafia syndicate headed by Santo Trafficante, Jr. Consequently, since early 1956, Lansky established a number of alliances with key personages from Las Vegas, Chicago and California, made arrangements with important political and financial figures and strengthened old links with intelligence services to provide greater solidity to his business in Cuba. Interests represented by Sam Giancana, from Chicago, started operating.

The brothers Josef (Joe) and Charlie Sileci moved to Havana, as did as a large detachment of Italian-American gangsters, together with Hollywood film stars linked to these families, such as Tony Martin, Donald O'Connor, Frank Sinatra and George Raft, and also a select group of U. S. businessmen, with many relations and political influences which reached all the way to the White House itself. Additionally, Nick di Constance - whose real name was Nicholas di Constanzo -, an extraordinarily feared man known as Fat Butcher, came to the Cuban capital and very soon controlled all the casinos in Havana.

It is interesting to note that among the files processed by the National Identification Office which granted the immigrant cards, Fat Butcher was number 396315 and Joe Sileci number 396316, which indicates that they applied together to legalize their immigration status. People who knew him say Nicholas di Constanzo was almost two meters tall and was once seen in the Capri or the Riviera Hotel lift a man by the lapel with only one hand and smash him against a wall.

It Was Too Late

In his memoirs, United States President Dwight D. Eisenhower affirms that:

"[…] during 1958, and in keeping with the Charter of the OAS, the United States strictly observed a policy of non-intervention in Cuba, although the sentiment of support towards Castro was very extensive. "We repeatedly seized shipments of arms destined to Castro and in March we stopped sending weapons to Batista […]"

This statement does not withstand the least confrontation with historical events. After March 1958 and until the final days of the war, Batista continued receiving arms, military supplies, material resources and support from US politicians and special agencies; his troops continued training under the advisory of the US military mission in Havana and above all, the operations of their intelligence services became more intense and bolder.

Even during the days when Batista's air force systematically bombed vast peasant areas in the former Oriente province, the dictator's air force was replenished with supplies from U S arsenals in the Guantanamo Naval Base.

In September of 1958, CIA General Inspector Lyman Kirkpatrick made his last trip to Cuba. He met with the head of the CIA station in Havana, advisors and military attachés, representatives of the Federal Bureau of Investigations (FBI), secret agents, financiers, executives from US companies, the US embassy's political staff, other agents and private and official personalities. The conclusion reached was that - according to what Kirkpatrick wrote ten years later in his book The Real CIA - Batista had lost control of the country and all hope was hanging from a miracle.

Sam "Mooney" Giancana of the Chigaco Mob Reveal the Coin Of Machinery Of Republic

King and Coin, Crown and Coin, The Country and its Currency, the taproots of Civil structure and authority, enforceable contracts including the Social Contract and the Power of Purse.

John F. Kennedy spoke of the US Presidency as the High and Noble Office and did so in contention with the the Crown of Great Britain and he spoke of being able to fire in this country who would be Lords and aristocrats in other England whose whole family legacies were guaranteed position in the peering system.

The checks and balances of the Sovereigns seal is not a ring pressed into wax it is the scrutiny of the press yet that is either what has been attacked OR simply bought as commercial enterprises to print loyalist statements about the conspirators. It is somewhat analogous to Canada that took British Loyalists who had lost the fight in the War for Independence and thus left the 13 Colonies.

An Indictment of the USA a country of filth and corruption

Sam "Mooney" Giancana according to his brother Chuck always knew he lived in a toxic House of Cards with the politicians who had made illegal deals with him for illegal activities of drug crimes, assassinations and murders of ordinary citizens and "snitches," of warfare in disguise or through intermediaries against the governments of other nations that often included thousands or in many cases millions dead and heavy civilian losses, and profiteer criminals in the USA like the CIA company owners bilking the world and the US Government for large personal fortunes. This is the truth of the USA.

Chapter 18 of his book is a list of victims of crimes, homicide, and that list includes Marilyn Monroe, John F. Kennedy, and Robert F. Kennedy. Chapter 19 is the explanation in his own words to Chuck Giancana that Giancana and the "Outfit" were the murderers.

Double Cross has a few key paragarphs and here is one from Chapter 19 about Robert F. Kennedy in particular who had been trying to bulldoze that house of cards.

According to everyone Chuck talked to, Mooney was currently at the hub of most illegal affairs nationally—with the exception of those originating in New York. Guys such as Daley, Johnson or Marcello were simply spokes on a very big wheel. Mooney wasted no time cashing in on his new connection to the White House, telling Chuck he'd already begun expanding his underworld network to include dictators, presidents, and smuggling czars—from nations as diverse as Haiti, the Dominican Republic, Iran, Lebanon, Italy, France, Nicaragua, Guatemala, the Philippines, and Laos. Mooney also revealed he'd been in communication with his buddies from the CIA. "It's beautiful," Mooney said one day at the Thunderbolt, playfully stirring his martini with a swizzle stick while the refrain of Bing Crosby's "White Christmas" played in the background. "The Outfit even has the same enemies as the government." He glanced around the empty lounge, decorated for the holidays with stylish silver ornaments and red satin ribbons, and lowered his voice slightly, "I've been meeting with the CIA guys since last August; we're gonna hit Castro, Trujillo from the Dominican Republic, and some nigger in the Congo." "So," Chuck said, lighting a cigar. "Don't leave me hangin'."

... Mooney went on to say that CIA director Allen Dulles was the one who'd originally come up with the idea of taking out Castro. Two officials, Richard Bissell and Sheffield Edwards, were selected to put the scheme into action. For their liaison to the Outfit, Mooney said they called on Bob Maheu. "The guy from the FBI?" "The guy who used to be with the FBI. He has a cover, a detective agency.

After Mooney's initial meeting with Maheu, one arranged by his lieutenant Johnny Roselli, Mooney told Chuck he instructed Roselli to tell Santo Trafficante and Carlos Marcello he wanted them to provide the assistance necessary—their Cuban connections—to pull off the CIA assassination plan. Mooney made Roselli the go-between with Maheu and the CIA. Meanwhile, Mooney said he put Jack Ruby back in action supplying arms, aircraft, and munitions to exiles in Florida and Louisiana, while the former Castro Minister of Games, Frank Fiorini, joined Ruby in the smuggling venture along with a Banister CIA associate, David Ferrie.

Then came the Double Cross. JFK and RFK had too much support for sovereign nations, freedom from Great Britain and Robber Barrons and criminals and the escalation of Robert F. Kennedy to Attorney General was a source of energy that could bring down the blatantly illegal corrupt house of cards.

> As Chuck would conclude after their conversation that December, the Castro plot was only the tip of one iceberg, in a vast sea of icebergs, on a course charted by his brother and his undercover friends. It was a course that would result in the creation of a team of skilled men possessing the wherewithal to assassinate any world leader. News of Bobby Kennedy's appointment as attorney general that December came to Mooney like a rabbit punch in the dark. The relaxed attitude he'd developed since the election vanished as suddenly as it had appeared. A seething anger simmered beneath his bitter > disappointment. The immediate question from Hoffa, Marcello, and Trafficante was, “What the fuck is Jack Kennedy up to?”

> - Giancana, Sam; Giancana, Chuck; Giancana, Bettina. Double Cross: The Explosive Inside Story of the Mobster Who Controlled America (p. 388). Skyhorse. Kindle Edition.

Sam Giancana would find out that increasingly the administration had been stringing Giancana along only to set him up for a later fall. As Giancana had noted earlier in his book if J. Edgar Hoover ever felt threatened he could have done the same thing; blame Giancana as lone actor the FBI had not backed and had no knowledge of. That was the whole point of intermediaries who if caught could be disavowed publicly.

John F. Kennedy appointed his brother, Robert F. Kennedy, as Attorney General of the United States on January 21, 1961, the day after JFK was inaugurated as President. Robert F. Kennedy served in this role until September 3, 1964. Robert F. Kennedy was confirmed as Attorney General by the Senate on January 30, 1961. This was shortly after his brother, John F. Kennedy, took office as President on January 20, 1961. It appears Willliam King Harvey, Sam Giancana, Chauncey Marvin Holt, Johny Roselli, and others were plotting the death of JFK from Deember 14, 1961 a meeting for that purpose at El Mirador hotel owned by Ray Ryan.

According to an investigative reporter La Cosa Nostra off the coast of Italy on the island of Corsica was being solicited for hitmen to hit JFK

Sam Giancana, Santo Trafficate, Carlos Marcello. They had the contract out on JFK. The usual names had an OSS CIA contract and an operative of the CIA going back to WWII was part of trying to find assassins to take the contract. According to Chauncey Marvin Holt when he arrived at Dealey Plaza it was a "whose who" of hit-men from around the world.

Antoine Guerini a James Jesus and James Hugh Angleton connection?

Antoine Guerini was born in Marseilles, France. As a young man Guerini associated with gangsters from Marseilles. During the Second World War joined the French Resistance and was responsible for smuggling arms into the city for the Mouvements Unis de la Résistance (MUR).

After the war Guerini, became the dominant crime boss in Marseilles. It was later claimed by the journalist Stephen Rivele, that Guerini organized the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. According to his contact, Christian David, the killing was carried out by Lucien Sarti and two other members of the Marseilles mob.

In the 1960s Marcel Francisci, the owner of a lucrative international gambling syndicate, began to threaten Guerini's control of Marseilles. On 23rd June, 1967, two hired assassins fired eleven bullets into Antoine Guerini while he was in a gas station.

In 1981 Rivele met Christian David (a French national), the leader of the Corsican network in South America.

Some assassins named were later found NOT involved. https://spartacus-educational.com/JFKrivele.htm "Recently Rivele commented that: 'I believe that Sarti was involved, but apparently I was wrong on the other two. If I were working on the case today, I'd look at Paul Mondoloni of Montreal... Two points I would add: I saw a documentary TV show last year about the KGB's investigation of the assassination, and was amazed to learn that they came to the same conclusion as me. Second, I was contacted two years ago by a former CIA agent (who worked in the mind control program among others), who told me that I was right about the assassination. Small comfort but better than nothing.'"

"According to writer Steve Ravell;s lone pursuit of Kennedy's killers" led to a French drug smuggler in prison in the United States who claimed he had some first-hand information on the matter. He Charles Davide had been both an intelligence and French Connection heroin smuggler.

In 1988 before Louis Gibson identified Chauncey Marvin Holt(who worked for Murder Inc., an outgrowth of Sam Giancan's 42 Gang in that Giancana consolidated most other mobs including Bugy Myer gang) and Charles Harrelson, before Holt confessed on camera before his death from cancer, before the film JFK with Oliver Stone involved, before the Giancana family had released their 1991 tell-all, the Men Who Killed Kennedy in 1988 came up with these names as probables baseed on what the underworld knew. Sam Giancana, Santo Trafficante Jr., and Carlos Marcello. Some of it was speculation among the Corsican mafia based on bullet type, but it was known by underworld figures hit men were being sought by the three mafia figures, that it included the mafia drug dealing in Latin American, and this all turned out to be true. In addition Col Prouty notes this aas in the assassination handbook of the CIA he and Lansdale were working out of and USAF General Edward Lansdale was with these Giancana figures at the train-yard in the same photo as the hobos.

Among the interwoven confessions to the CIA murder of JFK were bumbling stumbling Richard Nixon recorded and some erased data also that Watergate break-in was needed to stop the JFK assassination from coming back to haunt everyone. LBJ also confessed to the use of Lanskey and Murder Inc in the Caribbean and that the probable reason JFK was killed.

Is there confirmation from E. Howard Hunt and St John Hunt his son as to William King Harvey directing Sam "Mooney" Giancana and others and the Antoine Guerini Corsican Mafia connection? Yes. On tap before E. Howard Hunt died

> E. Howard Hunt and the JFK Plotters By Eric Hamburg now on Wikileaks
> How much of Howard Hunt's scenario holds up under examination. Surprisingly, much of it does. The people that he names as part of the plot are, for the most part, people whose names have cropped up over and over again in the assassination literature. There is substantial evidence to implicate them in a plot to kill JFK. For this reason, Hunt's revelations are more credible than they might otherwise be. A review of the literature indicates why this is so.
> Let's start with William Harvey. He was named by Hunt as the mastermind of the plot, as well as being called an "alcoholic psycho" by Hunt.. There is ample evidence for both of these propositions.
> Consider the following statements regarding William Harvey, made by author Anthony Summers in his seminal work "Conspiracy". Summers writes, "In the closing stages of the (House) Assassinations Committee mandate, some staff members felt that, while Mafia marksmen may have carried out the assassination, it could only have been orchestrated by someone in America intelligence, someone with special knowledge of Oswald's background. As they pondered this, investigators gave renewed attention to the senior CIA officer who co-coordinated the CIA-Mafia plots against Castro - William Harvey. [It goes on to many other figures and then gets to the Corsicans]
> In his account of the conspiracy, E. Howard Hunt named eight central figures. These were Lyndon Johnson, Cord Meyer, David Atlee Phillips, William K. Harvey, Antonio Veciana, Frank Sturgis, David Morales, and Lucien Sarti. Of these, perhaps the most surprising name is that of Cord Meyer. Meyer was a high official of the CIA, who had good reason to hate John F. Kennedy, yet his name has rarely come up in assassination circles.
> In his handwritten memo to St. John, Hunt added this: "Like the rest of the country, NADA [Hunt] is stunned by JFKs death and realizes how lucky he is not to have had a direct role. In Danbury federal prison [after Watergate], Epsilon [Sturgis] and NADA [Hunt] reflect on the "Big Event". Oswald is dead so the feds have nobody to prosecute. Epsilon [Sturgis] speculates that Jack Ruby was selected to kill Oswald by the mob. Epsilon [Sturgis] reveals that one of the Dallas shooters was a foreigner." Hunt later informed St. John and me that the foreigner was a French Corsican gunman named Sarti. This could only have been Lucien Sarti, as Hunt suggests in his book "American Spy.".

The Men Who Killed Kennedy Ep.2 The Forces of Darkness https://youtu.be/bM5u0PM_Rm0?si=_r33zEWCy1kK43Yj on the question of payment uh michelle agreed with David that the assassins had been paid in heroin and he went a bit farther uh in my first 34:21 conversation with him he indicated that although he did not know it at the time it was he who converted the heroin 34:28 payment into cash for the assassins he indicated at least initially that the three men 34:34 had appeared at his apartment in buenos aires uh in the months following the assassination with as he put it a 34:39 substantial quantity of heroin he was surprised because to his knowledge it was the first time that any 34:45 of the three of them had dealt in heroin but given his reputation for not asking embarrassing questions he simply agreed 34:51 to convert the heroin into cash for them did they ever give you any indication about who was behind this contract 35:01 not just no they didn't talk to me about that it was uh christian david told me that 35:07 it was someone in the mafia but i don't know who it was 35:14 but it was known more or less generally in this circle of frenchman in south america that it was the mafia that was behind it 35:20 yes my own conviction at this point is the contract probably originated with carlos marcello 35:27 of new orleans who placed it in marseille through his 35:33 colleague santos trafficante junior who had the closest relations with antoine germaine beyond that 35:39 it seems reasonable that Giancana of chicago was involved if uh we 35:46 accept david and michelle's idea that uh the assassins were met at the border by representatives of the 35:52 chicago mafia and the fact that sartiz customers were primarily in 35:57 new york and the fact that the assassins evidently moved out of the united states through the montreal corridor 36:02 which was very closely linked to the new york mafia also suggests that gambino may have been involved 46:19 about the assassination but the mafia could hardly have acted alone given the intricacy of the 46:25 assassination plot and the strength of the cover-up for 25 years colonel fletcher prouty was chief of 46:31 special operations of the joint chiefs of staff during kennedy's presidency he believes

even more powerful forces were 46:37 ultimately responsible i think without any question it's what we called the use of hired gunmen 46:44 and this isn't new in fact this little manual here which is called the assassination manual for latin america 46:50 contains a line which says that talking about latin america if 46:56 possible professional criminals will be hired to carry out specific selective jobs jobs in quote 47:03 which means murders well if this manual for latin america printed within the last few years 47:09 and a government manual says that there's no question but what the application of the same techniques 47:15 was dated back in kennedy's time in fact i know that from my own experience you know i was in that business in those days so 47:22 with that knowledge you begin to realize that hired criminals the way this book says 47:29 can be hired by anybody in power with sufficient money to pay them but more importantly with sufficient 47:36 power to operate the cover-up ever after because you see this one thing to kill 47:42 somebody it's another thing to cover up the fact that you did it or that you hired somebody to do it and that's more 47:48 difficult so they use the device of the warren commission report to cover up their hired killers now who 47:54 would hire the color killers and who has the power to put the warren commission report out over the top of the whole story you 48:01 see you're dealing with a very high echelon of power it doesn't necessarily reside in any 48:06 government it doesn't necessarily reside in any single corporate institution 48:11 but it seems to reside in a blend of the two otherwise how could you have gotten people like the chief justice supreme 48:18 court to participate in the cover-up the police in dallas to participate in the cover-up etc and the media 48:25 you know all the media not just one or two newspapers but none of them will print the story that other than oswald killed the 48:31 president with three bullets something that's absolutely untrue i think it's extremely important 48:37 for the american people to know that there can be the overthrow of a government that there 48:43 can be a coup d'etat in america that that in fact did happen through the assassination of president kennedy 48:49 in order to prevent that kind of thing from happening again in order to expose the forces that were responsible for that kind of 48:56 murder and the kind of cover-up that has ensued in the following 25 years 49:01 it's necessary to expose it otherwise we can have the same thing repeated again therefore in the same fashion 49:08 that we have exposed problems and scandals involved with watergate problems in 49:14 vietnam problems in central america problems in the overthrow of governments elsewhere like allende in chile 49:20 and on and on and on so must we expose that same kind of political 49:26 assassination in our country as painful as it may be as disruptive as it might be in a 49:32 transitory nature as embarrassing as it might be to certain individuals and organizations in the united states 49:38 government that has to be uncovered if they were able to do it to john f kennedy then they could do it to some 49:44 other president in the future

Mooney said he was putting everything in place. He'd sent Lewis McWillie to serve as pit boss of the Tropicana in Havana. McWillie was one of his soldiers from Texas, where he'd run guns south of the border as well as smuggling narcotics, and whom he said had previously worked with Jack Ruby and Frank Fiorini -aka Frank Sturgis. When McWillie wasn't working the casino, Mooney explained, he would be assisting Johnny Roselli with their smuggling operations. Roselli still spent a large portion of his time in Hollywood and Vegas, but now he often floated from city to city, representing Chicago-and Mooney -much as a diplomat might represent his country's leader.

"Covert operations specialist and some top brass in U.S. military intelligence from Asia in attendance. After this meeting, Mooney said that Roselli met "several times" with members of the original group as well as a CIA agent. Roselli also continued to serve as Mooney's go-between to Marcello, Traficante, and Hoffa, men who were equally eager to see their nemesis, Jack Kennedy, eliminated.

Mooney said that the entire conspiracy went "right up to the top of the CIA." He claimed that some of its former and present leaders were involved, as well as a "half dozen fanatical right-wing Texans, Vice President Lyndon Johnson, and one of the team from the Bay of Pigs Action Office under Eisenhower." The more Chuck understood about Mooney's plot and its multitude of players, the more apparent it became that there were few, if any, lines of demarcation between the Outfit and the CIA. There were no black hats and white hats; that was all a sham for, as Mooney put it, "saps to cling to." In many instances, the Outfit and the CIA were one and the same.

Such was the case, according to Mooney, with Frank Fiorini, Mooney's lieutenant who worked simultaneously with the government intelligence agency and would go on to become embroiled in Richard Nixon's Watergate fiasco under the alias Frank Sturgis."

The Watergate Break-In and the White House Plumbers https://www.maryferrell.org/pages/Watergate.html

Watergate burglars McCord, Gonzalez, Sturgis, Martinez, and Barker.

Liddy was the leader of the group, called the "White House Plumbers." The group had been formed in the wake of the publication of the Pentagon Papers and charged with investigating leaks. Some of the same team members had earlier broken into the office of the psychiatrist of Pentagon Papers leaker Daniel Ellsburg, in an effort to find materials with which to discredit Ellsburg.

The group of burglars were unusual to say the least. McCord and Hunt were both former CIA officers; questions remain regarding how "former" they were. Sturgis, aka Frank Fiorini, had been deeply involved in anti-Castro operations in the early 1960s, and had spread stories of Castro's supposed involvement in the Kennedy assassination in the immediate aftermath of that event (and began doing so again after his arrest). Bernard Barker, code-named AMCLATTER-1 in CIA files, was close to Hunt and had been a paid agent of the Agency from 1960 until 1966. Gonzalez had also been an agent of the CIA, and Martinez still was at the time of the break-in.

The White House Tapes and the "Bay of Pigs Thing"

Unknown to most at the time, Nixon had an automatic taping system in the White House. It would prove to be central to his undoing. One set of conversations, dubbed the "smoking gun tape" when later revealed to investigators, was recorded on June 23 - six days after the break-in. Nixon told his chief of staff H.R. "Bob" Haldeman to approach officials at the CIA, and have them intervene with the FBI's investigation of the break-in. Nixon explained that Hunt "knows too damn much" and "it's likely to blow the whole Bay of Pigs thing which we think would be very unfortunate for CIA and the country at this time, and for American foreign policy." CIA Director Helms refused to participate in this obstruction of justice.

The meaning of the "Bay of Pigs thing" phrase, recurring in three conversations of that day, was never determined. Haldeman later wrote in The Ends of Power that Helms, when confronted with Nixon's message, shouted back at him "The Bay of Pigs had nothing to do with this. I have no concern about the Bay of Pigs." But what did the failed Bay of Pigs invasion of Cuba have to do with anything? Haldeman later wrote that "It seems that with all those Nixon references to the Bay of Pigs, he was actually referring to the Kennedy assassination." Haldeman based this on his belief that Casto was behind the Kennedy assassination. Another theory, perhaps more plausible, is that Nixon was referring to the attempts on Castro's life, which were still secret at that time (the Church Committee publicly revealed details of these plots in 1975). Hunt's role in both of these events have long been matters of speculation and controversy (Hunt recorded a confession to knowledge of the JFK assassination plotters before his death).

E. Howard Hunt Watergate defendant and former CIA spy E. Howard Hunt. In other White House tapes, Nixon discussed raising hush money that Hunt and other defendants were demanding. - https://www.maryferrell.org/pages/Watergate.html

In the quest to hush the now unemployed CIA operatives Dorothy Hunt was looking for hush money and this led to UAL 553 sabotage and the Nixon administration cover-up of facts leading to a conspiracy motive for the "boston brakes" type CIA air disaster. CIA sketches of how an accident might unfold by tampering with brakes, etc.,

It is hard to deny this conspiracy since all involved by now have affirmed the truth of it.

Frank Anthony Sturgis (December 9, 1924 - December 4, 1993), born Frank Angelo Fiorini, was one of the five Watergate burglars whose capture led to the end of the presidency of Richard Nixon. He served in several branches of the United States military and in the Cuban Revolution of 1958, worked as an undercover operative for the Central Intelligence Agency,[2] and was alleged to be involved in the assassination of John F. Kennedy.

According to Joseph Smith, a former CIA officer in Asia, quoted from the book ‘Goddess: The Secret Lives of Marilyn Monroe’, written by Anthony Summer, there was a further meeting between Sukarno and Monroe after that night. https://thoryshinwa.wordpress.com/2014/07/10/ir-soekarno-and-marilyn-monroe-ever-have-proximity-is-it-true/

The first photo [Showing only Sukarno and Monroe] is based on a visit by Sukarno to the US around 1961 when the Kennedy administration feted him in a bid to turn around his pro-communist and anti-US tendencies. It didn’t work. He went on to the Soviet Union which turned on an even more lavish reception and awarded him the Lenin Peace Prize.

The second photo (with Jackie) is based on a cocktail party hosted in Beverly Hills for Sukarno in late May 1956. Gregory Peck and Ronald Reagan were also thought to have been there but Agan has not bothered making photos of Sukarno with these stars. He has played with the fact that Sukarno was a big fan of US movies (he had a cinema installed in his presidential palace to watch them) and had made it known he wanted to meet Marilyn Monroe while he was in the US.

Monroe (according to Sam Giancana) was killed by an anal dalivery of Nembutal (a barbituate) along with another drug the CIA felt hindered the metabolism of Nembutal. This had been designed to for use on Castro. The CIA decided to use on Monroe who became a liability to the Gaincana Mob (the Outfit) working for the CIA. That was August 4, 1962. Later November 8, 1965, about three years later Dorothy Kilgallen died of barbiturate overdose and many view that an Ron Patakis a suspicious. Pataki was born near Chicago and his poems sounded like Division 13 of the KGB the "Wetdivision" and poison inserted into a glass of Vodka. Was he Patake working for the CIA and Giancana?

The two Pataki and Kilgallen not only had Jack Ruby in common (perhaps) but the Von Trapp Singers. Pataki and Killgallen were on a publicity tour for a few movies Sound of Music included of the Von Trapp singers she also was on a Whats My Line show with.

Chapter 17 of the Tell All book Double Cross by the Giancana family in their own patriotic duty to set the record straight as to history (the family NOT on their deathbed fearing or hoping for any consequences to the truth) contains the pictures of the major crime figures and two key outcomes of the Outfit attack on the USA. The scene of the ambulance at Norma Jean's home and the Kennedy assasination photo of Kennedy in the car with his entorouge. These were the actions of the CIA.

In a corroborating and similar tell all by Giancana cohort Chauncey Marvin Holt book Self Portrait of a Scoundrel the appendix Documents and Photos holds many of the images of the figures and documents of history he was revealing. But again in Double Cross by the Giancana family their gifts to historians and justice as told by images is concentrated in the book's Chapter 17 where the US Congress and the Kennedy family go toe-to-toe with the Mafia.

Here is a list of the figures and events of history the Giancana (and Chauncey Marvin Holt and Meyers Lanksy) family are connected to by their own story telling in the order the string of photos and captions to the photos appear in.

Gus Greenbaum was an American gangster in the casino industry, best known for taking over management of the Flamingo Hotel in Las Vegas after the murder of co-founder Bugsy Siegel. Born: February 26, 1893, Phoenix, AZ Died: December 3, 1958 (age 65 years), Encanto Village, AZ - Wikipedia

TONY ACCARDO. CAP/ WIDE WORLD)

Anthony Joseph Accardo (/əˈkɑːrdoʊ/; born Antonino Leonardo Accardo, Italian: [antoˈniːno leoˈnardo akˈkardo]; April 28, 1906 - May 22, 1992), also known as "Joe Batters" and "Big Tuna",[1] was an American longtime mobster.

In a criminal career that spanned eight decades, he rose from small-time hoodlum to the position of day-to-day boss of the Chicago Outfit in 1947, to ultimately becoming the power behind the throne in the Outfit by 1972. Accardo moved the Outfit into new operations and territories, significantly increasing its power and wealth during his tenure as boss. - Wikipedia

JIMMY HOFFA. CAP/ WIDE WORLD)

James Riddle Hoffa (born February 14, 1913 - disappeared July 30, 1975, declared dead July 30, 1982) was an American labor union leader who served as the president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters (IBT) from 1957 until 1971. He is notorious for his alleged ties to organized crime and for his disappearance under mysterious circumstances in 1975.

From an early age, Hoffa was a union activist: he became an important regional figure with the IBT by his mid-20s. By 1952, he was the national vice-president of the IBT and between 1957 and 1971 he was its general president. Hoffa secured the first national agreement for teamsters' rates in 1964 with the National Master Freight Agreement. He played a major role in the growth and the development of the union, which eventually became the largest by membership in the United States, with over 2.3 million members at its peak, during his terms as its leader.

Hoffa became involved with organized crime from the early years of his Teamsters work, a connection that continued until his disappearance. He was convicted of jury tampering, attempted bribery, conspiracy, along with mail and wire fraud in 1964 in two separate trials. He was imprisoned in 1967 and sentenced to 13 years.

In mid-1971, he resigned as president of the union as part of a commutation agreement with U.S. president Richard Nixon and was released later that year, but he was barred from union activities until 1980. Hoping to regain support and to return to IBT leadership, he unsuccessfully tried to overturn the order.

Hoffa disappeared on July 30, 1975. He is generally thought to have been murdered by the Mafia, and was declared legally dead in 1982. Hoffa's legacy and the circumstances of his disappearance continue to stir debate.

CARLOS MARCELLO. CAP/ WIDE WORLD)

Carlos Joseph Marcello[1] (Sicilian Italian);[Mor-sel-lo] born Calogero Minacore [kaˈlɔːdʒero minaˈkɔːre]; February 6, 1910 - March 3, 1993) was an Italian-American crime boss of the New Orleans crime family from 1947 to 1983. Aside from his role in the American Mafia, he is also notorious for the reason that G. Robert Blakey and others have alleged that Carlos Marcello, Santo Trafficante Jr., and Sam Giancana conspired in the 1963 assassination of U.S. President John F. Kennedy in retaliation for federal investigations and prosecutions that threatened both the power and the multibillion-dollar profits of organized crime. - Wikipedia

JOHNNY ROSELLI AP/WORLD WIDE

John "Handsome Johnny" Roselli (born Filippo Sacco; July 4, 1905 - August 7, 1976), sometimes spelled Rosselli, was a mobster for the Chicago Outfit who helped that organization exert influence over Hollywood and the Las Vegas Strip. Roselli was recruited by the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) in a plot to assassinate Cuban leader Fidel Castro.

SANTO TRAFICANTE, JR.

Santo Trafficante Jr. (November 15, 1914 - March 17, 1987) was among the most powerful Mafia bosses in the United States. He headed the Trafficante crime family from 1954 to 1987 and controlled organized criminal operations in Florida and Cuba, which had previously been consolidated from several rival gangs by his father, Santo Trafficante Sr.

Trafficante maintained links to the Bonanno crime family in New York City, but was more closely allied with Sam Giancana in Chicago. Consequently, while generally recognized as the most powerful organized crime figure in Florida throughout much of the 20th century, Trafficante was not believed to have total control over Miami, Miami Beach, Ft. Lauderdale, or Palm Beach. The east coast of Florida was a loosely knit conglomerate of New York family interests with links to Meyer Lansky, Bugsy Siegel, Angelo Bruno, Carlos Marcello, and Frank Ragano.

Trafficante admitted his anti-Castro activities to the United States House Select Committee on Assassinations in 1978, and vehemently denied allegations that he had knowledge of a plot to assassinate President John F. Kennedy. Federal investigators brought racketeering and conspiracy charges against him in the summer of 1986.

CHUCK NICOLETTI. CAP/ WIDE WORLD)

Charles Nicoletti (/ˌnɪkəˈlɛti/; December 3, 1916 - March 29, 1977), also known as "Chuckie the Typewriter", was an American mobster of the Chicago Outfit, who served as hitman under boss Sam Giancana before and after Giancana's rise and fall. Nicoletti was murdered on March 29, 1977.

FELIX "MILWAUKEE PHIL" ALDERISIO. (AP/WIDE WORLD)

Felix Anthony "Milwaukee Phil" Alderisio (April 26, 1912 - September 25, 1971) was an American enforcer, bagman, hitman and burglar for the Chicago Outfit. He was underboss to Sam Giancana during the 1960s and boss from 1967 to his imprisonment in 1969. - Wikipedia

RICHARD CAIN. CAP/ WIDE WORLD)

Richard Cain (October 4, 1931 - December 20, 1973), also known as Richard Scalzitti, was a notoriously corrupt Chicago police officer and a close associate of Mafia boss Sam Giancana.

Richard Cain was born to John and Lydia (née Scully) Cain - who were Irish-American and Italian-American, respectively - in Chicago, Illinois. Cain was raised in Chicago and Michigan after his parents divorced. He joined the U.S. Army at the age of 17 and was stationed in the United States Virgin Islands from 1947 to 1950. While there, he became fluent in Spanish. Before returning to Chicago in 1951, Cain worked as an investigator at the Burns Detective Agency in Dallas, Texas.

Despite his grandfather having been a prominent sewer contractor who was killed by the Chicago Outfit in Little Italy, in 1928,[2] Cain would later become a close associate of Sam Giancana. While Cain worked as an officer in the Chicago Police Department (CPD) during the mid-1950s, he served as a bagman between corrupt police officials and the Outfit.

Double deal and disgrace. Taking a leave of absence from the CPD in 1960, Cain was assigned as an investigator for Assistant U.S. Attorney Richard Ogilvie in his investigation of Outfit boss Anthony Accardo.

Cain alluded to having been deported from Mexico in 1961 after helping train Cuban-Americans for the Bay of Pigs invasion. After his death, "Washington sources" confirmed "off-the-record" that these claims were true.[3] He also claimed to have worked with the U.S. State Department "tracing the flow of American money into Communist hands." - Wikipedia

HEARSE TRANSPORTS MARILYN MONROE'S BODY FROM THE STAR'S HOME, AUGUST 5, 1962. (AP/WIDE WORLD)

Nicoletti said that three other planes also landed in California that week-in San Francisco-carrying four other men. Mooney had selected a trusted assassin, Needles Gianola, to coordinate the job. Needles, in turn, brought his sidekick, Mugsy Tortorella, on board and two other professional killers-one from Kansas City and one from Detroit. The four men had gone to California, under Mooney's orders, to murder Marilyn Monroe.

Eavesdropping nearby, where the electronic surveillance equipment had been set up by Bernie Spindel, the killers patiently waited for the attorney general to arrive. Bobby Kennedy finally did appear at Marilyn's home, late on Saturday, accompanied by another man. Listening in on the conversation, Mooney's men ascertained that Marilyn was more than a little angry at Bobby. She became agitated -hysterical, in fact-and in response, they heard Kennedy instruct the man with him, evidently a doctor, to give her a shot to "calm her down." Shortly thereafter, the attorney general and the doctor left.

The killers waited for the cover of darkness and, sometime before midnight, entered Marilyn's home. She struggled at first, it was said, but already drugged by the injected sedative, thanks to Bobby's doctor friend, their rubber-gloved hands easily forced her nude body to the bed.

Calmly, and with all the efficiency of a team of surgeons, they taped her mouth shut and proceeded to insert a specially "doctored" Nembutal suppository into her anus.

Then they waited.

The suppository, which Nicoletti said had been prepared by the same Chicago chemist who concocted the numerous chemical potions for the Castro hit[.]

SAM "MOONEY" GIANCANA'S BODY LIES ON A STRETCHER IN THE COOK COUNTY (CHICAGO ILLINOIS) MORGUE. CAP/ WIDE WORLD)

iancana was born in Chicago to Italian immigrant parents. He joined the 42 Gang as a teenager, developing a reputation in organized crime, which gained him the notice of the leaders of the Chicago Outfit, which he joined during the late 1930s. From the 1940s through the 1950s, he controlled illegal gambling, illegal liquor distribution, and political rackets in Louisiana. In the early 1940s, Giancana was involved in a takeover of Chicago's black American lottery payout system for the Outfit. In 1957, he became the boss of the Chicago Outfit.

According to some sources, Giancana and the Mafia were involved in John F. Kennedy's victory in the 1960 presidential election. During the 1960s, he was recruited by the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) in a plot to assassinate Cuban leader Fidel Castro. Conspiracy theorists consider Giancana, along with Mafia leaders Santo Trafficante Jr. and Carlos Marcello, to be associated with the assassination of John F. Kennedy. In 1965, Giancana was convicted of contempt of court, serving one year in prison. After his release from prison, Giancana fled to Cuernavaca, Mexico. In 1974, he was deported to the United States, returning to Chicago. Giancana was murdered on June 19, 1975, in Oak Park, Illinois, shortly before he was scheduled to appear before the Church Committee. - Wikipedia

Days before Holt died Voice Over the off screen TV interviewer of Holt gave this interview

VO: Chauncey Holt continued his association with the CIA during the 1960's and 1970's. He played a role in covert operations in Brazil, Laos and Chile. At the same time Holt maintained his close friendship and business interests with mafia boss Peter Licavoli until the mobster's death in 1984. Holt also continued to be deeply involved through the years with attorney Frank Belcher with whom he maintained a joint banking account at the Bank of America in Burbank, CA. Many of Holt's CIA contract agent "projects" were funded and funneled through this special account.

In 1975 the CIA began to purge rogue contract agents, aka "cowboys" from its employ. Some were forced into retirement, while others like Chauncey Holt ended up in prison. On January 2, 1976, Holt had written a letter to his old CIA ally William King Harvey apprising him of his recent indictment by a federal grand jury. Harvey responded by saying he could only offer "token assistance." Harvey did offer to send Chauncey some CIA documents that were about to be declassified. These records proved that Holt worked for the Clandestine Operations of the Central Intelligence Agency.

As recounted elsewhere, Operation Mongoose was revived and a number of contract agents, as well as the Cubans and gangsters like Giancana, Licavoli, Roselli, Traficante and Rothman, who answered to Lansky, were involved in these attempts on Castro, many of which were not only ludicrous but bordered on lunacy.

On December 14, 1961, I [Chauncey Holt one of the trainyard hobos working for William King Harvey known as Mr H) attended a meeting at Bermuda Dunes Airport, a proprietary interest of the CIA, operated by Ray Ryan and an old time pilot by the name of Ernie Dunlevie. This was the only meeting I attended where most of the principals involved in the plot to assassinate Fidel Castro were present. Those present included William King Harvey, Peter Licavoli, Sam Giancana, Johnny Roselli, Ray Ryan and Frank Hayden. Ernie Dunlevie was not present. I acted as the secretary and I still have the handwritten notes of that meeting.

It was decided that the ZR/RIFLE program would be applied to Cuba. There would be maximum security and non- attributability in regard to this project. The term "Kubark" and "Kutube/D Search" were assigned to the plan. We were advised not to us "AM" but rather "Mongoose" when referring to this project. Operations would be implemented through word of mouth, person to person, singleton ops and nothing on paper. We were assured that phony 201 files would be inserted in the central registry and backdated. I was assigned Q J/ lose and was instructed to prepare the necessary forged documents. All this would be implemented through Special Group (augmented), coded Task 33.

9 Months after the meeting with William King Harvey and Sam Giacana and John Roselli these same crowd will kill Marilyn Monroe. Monroe was going to reveal the ongoing CIA overthrows operation and thus she was silenced. A member of the Greek Community in Chicago learned of the operation from their own mouths and also was silenced. Johnny Roselli is a very central figured named by others and in declassified CIA and FBI documents in the national archives.

Roselli agree to introduce Maheu to "Sam Gold." At this point the Report refers to a memorandum prepared by Edwards, dated 14 May 1962, re money not paid to ... https://www.archives.gov/files/research/jfk/releases/180-10141-10406.pdf

This CIA task force was to assassinate Castro (and I believe other operations) and did assassinate "leakers" RFK, JFK, and Marilyn Monroe and others.

JEANNE LAVERNE CARMEN (AUGUST 4, 1930 - DECEMBER 20, 2007) was an American model, actress and trick-shot golfer. In 1998, Carmen was the subject of a TV episode titled "Jeanne Carmen: Queen of the B-Movies" on the series E! True Hollywood Story. The show stated that Carmen maintained a "dangerously close friendship with Marilyn Monroe and The Kennedys" and that after the death of Monroe, Carmen was told to leave town by Johnny Rosselli who was working for Chicago Mob Boss Sam Giancana. Believing her life was in danger, she fled to Scottsdale, Arizona, where she lived incognito for more than a decade. Carmen abandoned her platinum-blonde locks, had three children, and lived a quiet life, never mentioning her prior life in Hollywood.

[2 mins 14 s] The second personal anecdote that I have is is uh related to my Greek family extended Greek family in Chicago.

Story Goes that a 18-year-old girl named Eugenia Pappas was an attractive Greek girl who was a hair stylist in distant relative in the Greek family and she befriended a man named Frank Schweihs. Frank Schweihs it turns out was in the mafia but Eugenia dated him and relates to the story of travelingh from puke airport uh a group of uh Hitmen that flew to Los Angeles on the morning uh of uh August the 4th (1962) the day that Marilyn Monroe died.

The hit men went to a party and then they left the party and then they came back after a while and then they next day they flew back to uh Chicago.

Eugenia relates later after she broke up with Frank Schweihs that that this was a hit on Marilyn Monroe on orders from Sam Giancana. Now subsequently Eugenia Pappas was killed uh and was found in the Chicago River. Several months later and many of the people that had been involved with the Marilyn Monroe murder were sworn to see secrecy including a jean Carman uh who was one of Marilyn's girlfriends she later wrote a book called uh my Wild Wild Life and Jean Carman went into hiding for uh 16 years uh until Sam Giancana died was killed and then came out of hiding and tells her story of the mafia involvement in the murder of Marilyn Monroe.

5 mins 10 seconds. Sam and Chuck Giancana involving the Marilyn Monroe murder. was bugged as well one other piece of information that 5:12 I think is interesting is in a book uh by Sam and Chuck Giancana uh 5:18 involving the Maryland Monroe murder they mentioned that a suppository was concocted by University chemist that had 5:25 Nembutal (Nembutal is a prescription sedative that has medical value but is dangerous when misused. Chloral hydrate is a geminal diol with the formula Cl 3C−CH(OH) 2. It was first used as a sedative and hypnotic in Germany in the 1870s. ) and chlorohydrate uh and that this suppository was a part of the CIA Mafia 5:31 plan to kill Fidel Castro uh and that the mafia had this supposed to available 5:38 and had used it on some of their own uh victims uh and verified that indeed it did work in fact they found that with 5:45 Marilyn Monroe she had 15 times the Fatal level of chlorohydrate and Nembutal 5:52 uh in her bloodstream that time she died and this had in my opinion been most likely from a suppository you couldn't 5:59 get that many pills down somebody's stomach uh and uh get that high of a drug 6:06 level also Jean Carmen relates that Marilyn had called her uh the night that 6:12 she died and asked for sleeping pills because she was out of sleeping pills Jee Carman declined and said I don't 6:19 have any either but it's interesting that here Maryland was out of sleeping pills and yet she's been accused of 6:25 taking an overdose of sleeping pills uh less than an hour after she had called Jee Carman so it's 6:32 unlikely that Marilyn died from ingestion of Nembutal chlorohydrate pills.

Eunice Murray (housekeeper staying with Monroe that night) "The Maid Did It, In The Bedroom, With An Enema " https://marilynadayinthelife.com/eunice-murray/

14:13 greenson has Unice Murray the housekeeper stay at the house that night she doesn't normally stay at the house 14:19 but Unice Murray uh stays at the house and she's going to stay there all night this is kind of a little mixup in the 14:26 original plan the original plan would be that Marilyn would be discovered dead that following morning the police would 14:31 be called and there'd be an investigation and Robert Kennedy's name would get dragged into it and so on and 14:37 so forth but with Unice Murray there as Jean Carman relates the story The Hitman 14:43 also abused Unice Murray that night in other words Marilyn wasn't the only 14:48 victim that night that Unice Murray was intimidate she was told you will tell the 14:55 police that Bobby Kennedy had been here earlier and you will not talk about our 15:00 presence here tonight if you do we'll come back and finish you off and finish 15:06 off your family that's my opinion that there are probably death threats against Unice Murray if she didn't call the 15:11 police so now Unice Murray had a dilemma after the Hitman left uh should she go 15:17 ahead and call the police and wait until that next morning or should she call Peter Lawford and and let him know what just transpired.

DOUBLE CROSS: THE EXPLOSIVE INSIDE STORY OF THE MOBSTER WHO CONTROLLED AMERICA

Although most Americans have known little up until now about Sam Giancana's impact on the nation, it's precisely this lack of knowledge that has made writing Double Cross so necessary. Tired of the blatant misinformation and inaccuracies that have continued to be reported on topics ranging from the St. Valentine's Day Massacre to the death of Marilyn Monroe and the assassination of John F. Kennedy, we decided it was time, once and for all, to tell the story of these events as Sam Giancana related it. The resulting revelations contained in Double Cross, although shocking, speak for themselves.

Thus, we now present what was confided to Chuck Giancana by his brother Sam Giancana as the truth of the times. It should be added that we do so with much sadness and no small measure of fear. This is a sordid and diffcult legacy-and one we did not choose. It's therefore our desire that, after completing the book, the reader will not find those bearing the Giancana name guilty, by association, with a man who so destructively changed the course of history.

From what Chuck could learn from his brother, in the late fifties and early sixties, Marilyn's desire to achieve stardom, coupled with her childlike desire to please, was exploited by the Outfit and the CIA, as well: Her sexual charms were employed by the CIA to frame world leaders-among them President Sukarno of Indonesia. Mooney insisted that using Monroe as bait, the CIA had successfully compromised leaders from Asia to the Middle East.

And Marilyn, perhaps more because she enjoyed the attentions of the world's most powerful men than for reasons of patriotism, had been a willing participant in the intrigue.

By June of 1962, Marilyn's film career was losing momentum; she'd become unreliable and deeply troubled. Early that summer, Mooney told Chuck he'd had a former FBI agent and a detective working on Marilyn's surveillance and in so doing had received a wealth of information about the starlet's habits, her emotional state, and stormy love life.

From what he'd learned, Mooney believed Marilyn's use to Chicago and the CIA was dwindling.

Later, Chuck would surmise that Marilyn Monroe's knowledge of CIA-Outfit collaborative efforts coupled with her increasingly severe emotional instability had become a dangerous combination. And that by July, thanks to a failing relationship with Bobby Kennedy, she had become not only expendable but -when Mooney received reports of her threats to Bobby Kennedy to "blow the lid off the whole damn thing"-a frightening liability, as well.

According to guys in the Outfit, it was at this time that the CIA, fearful of exposure by the vengeful, drug-addicted Monroe, requested that Mooney have her eliminated. And Mooney, smelling blood, seized on the CIA contract as a way to achieve another objective, as well. By murdering Monroe, it might be possible to depose the rulers of Camelot.

One week before her death, a distraught Marilyn Monroe flew in to Lake Tahoe's Cal-Neva Lodge. Unbeknownst to her, Mooney had orchestrated the invitation. Among the guests that weekend was a man Mooney jokingly referred to as "Peter the Rabbit" Lawford.

The killers waited for the cover of darkness and, sometime before midnight, entered Marilyn's home. She struggled at first, it was said, but already drugged by the injected sedative, thanks to Bobby's doctor friend, their rubber-gloved hands easily forced her nude body to the bed. Calmly, and with all the efficiency of a team of surgeons, they taped her mouth shut and proceeded to insert a specially "doctored" Nembutal suppository into her anus. Then they waited.

The death of Doroth Killgalen could be tied to Sam Giancana.

Killgallen died of barbiturate poisoning, Sound familiar? Pentobarbital (Nembutal) is a short-acting barbiturate sedative-hypnotic that is widely used in veterinary practice for anesthesia and euthanasia.

Adam Ronald Pataky was born in Danville, Illinois, on 21st May, 1935. His father owned a heating and air conditioning business. In 1950 the family moved to Columbus, Ohio. After high school Pataky attended Stanford University but failed to graduate.

Pataky returned to Columbus and graduated from Ohio State University with a degree in journalism in 1959. In 1961, he was hired as a film and drama critic for the Columbus Citizen-Journal.

In June, 1964, Pataky went on a trip paid for by Twentieth Century-Fox who used it to publicize three of its films: The Sound of Music, The Agony and the Ecstasy and Those Magnificent Men in Their Flying Machines. On the trip he met and began a relationship with fellow journalist, Dorothy Kilgallen. This relationship was kept a secret. In her book, Kilgallen (1979), Lee Israel gives Pataky the name of "Out-of-Towner". Apparently Pataky went up to Kilgallen and asked her if she was Clare Booth Luce.

It has been suggested by John Simkin that Kilgallen suspected that "Out-of-Towner" was a CIA spy. She therefore told her friends this is what he said so that if anything happened to her, a future investigator would realize that he was a CIA agent with links to Clare Booth Luce.

On 8th November, 1965, Dorothy Kilgallen, was found dead in her New York apartment. She was fully dressed and sitting upright in her bed. The police reported that she had died from taking a cocktail of alcohol and barbiturates. The notes for the chapter she was writing on the assassination of John F. Kennedy had disappeared.

The police reported that she had died from taking a cocktail of alcohol and barbiturates. The notes for the chapter she was writing on the assassination of John F. Kennedy had disappeared.

Some of her friends believed Kilgallen had been murdered. Marc Sinclaire was Kilgallen's personal hairdresser. He often woke Kilgallen in the morning. Kilgallen was usually out to the early hours of the morning and like her husband always slept late. When he found her body he immediately concluded she had been murdered.

(1) Kilgallen was not sleeping in her normal bedroom. Instead she was in the master bedroom, a room she had not occupied for several years.

(2) Kilgallen was wearing false eyelashes. According to Sinclaire she always took her eyelashes off before she went to bed.

(3) She was found sitting up with the book, The Honey Badger, by Robert Ruark, on her lap. Sinclaire claims that she had finished reading the book several weeks earlier (she had discussed the book with Sinclaire at the time).

(4) Kilgallen had poor eyesight and could only read with the aid of glasses. Her glasses were not found in the bedroom where she died.

(5) Kilgallen was found wearing a bolero-type blouse over a nightgown. Sinclaire claimed that this was the kind of thing "she would never wear to go to bed".

Mark Lane also believed that Kilgallen had been murdered. He said that "I would bet you a thousand-to-one that the CIA surrounded her (Kilgallen) as soon as she started writing those stories." The only new person who became close to Kilgallen during the last few months was Pataky.

Pataky left his job with the Columbus Citizen-Journalin 1980. He later worked as a artist-photographer. He also worked as a Christian counsellor. In 1993, the investigative reporter, David Herschel, discovered that "Out-of-Towner" was Pataky. In an interview with Herschel, Pataky admitted that he worked on articles about the assassination of John F. Kennedy with Dorothy Kilgallen. Pataky also confessed to meeting Kilgallen several times in the Regency Hotel. However, he denied Lee Israel's claim that he was with her on the night of her death. In December, 2005, Lee Israel admitted that the "Out-of-Towner" was Ron Pataky and that "he had something to do with it (the murder of Dorothy Kilgallen)".

https://padailypost.com/2018/12/03/local-author-says-columnist-cracked-the-jfk-case-in-1965-just-before-she-was-murdered/ Local author and attorney Marj Shaw says columnist cracked the JFK case in 1965, just before she was murdered.

BY DAVE PRICE Daily Post Editor

Mark Shaw, an investigative reporter and author from Burlingame, is out with a new book that connects the dots in the biggest crime story of the past century, the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

One of the most tantalizing facts in his new book, “Denial of Justice,” is that Jack Ruby, the man who gunned down JFK assassin Lee Harvey Oswald on national television, was in a Dallas newspaper building by a window overlooking Kennedy’s motorcade on that fateful afternoon of Nov. 22, 1963, when Kennedy was killed. Several witnesses saw Ruby there at the time of the shooting.

“Ruby obviously knew about the assassination before it happened,” Shaw told me in an interview last week. That revelation and other evidence in the book blows apart FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover’s claim that Oswald acted alone and points to a conspiracy led by New Orleans Mafia boss Carlos Marcello.

Poisoning death -Shaw landed upon this new information after writing the bestseller “The Reporter Who Knew Too Much,” which detailed how journalist and “What’s My Line?” panelist Dorothy Kilgallen was poisoned in 1965 while she was investigating the assassination.

Dorothy Kilgallen, in the hallway of a Texas courthouse, clutches the file of notes and documents she was collecting in the JFK assassination case. Photo courtesy of Mark Shaw. Shaw’s meticulous investigation showed that Kilgallen died when her drink was spiked with three lethal drugs by a man with whom she was having an affair, an Ohio newspaper columnist. But it’s likely he was spying on her at the behest of the FBI, the Mafia or both.

After the release of the “Reporter Who Knew Too Much,” Shaw was able to obtain the long-buried 2,000-page transcript of Ruby’s 1964 trial.

At the time, reporters didn’t pay much attention to the trial because, after all, Ruby shot Oswald on TV in the basement of the Dallas police station. It was open and shut, they thought. Nobody cared about who might have put Ruby up to killing Oswald. And besides, the media was uniformly pushing the government’s official line that Oswald acted alone. San Francisco lawyer's role . But the trial transcripts gave Shaw a lot of new material that showed Ruby was part of a conspiracy. Shaw figured out that Ruby's lawyer, famed San Francisco attorney Melvin Belli, was doing the mob a favor by having Ruby plead insanity, so that the investigation would stop right there. Who's going to believe a crazy man, right? Belli was "on call" for the mob after the assassination, Shaw writes. While having lunch at Scoma's on Fisherman's Wharf, Belli heard that Oswald had been killed. He remarked to a witness Shaw interviewed, "Well, since Oswald's dead, I'll have to defend Ruby."

At trial, Ruby wanted to take the stand, but Belli wouldn't let him. Ruby did give a couple of interviews to Kilgallen, who was a nationally known columnist for the Hearst Newspaper Syndicate. Apparently a great deal of what Kilgallen learned from Ruby didn't make it into her column, but she planned to use it in a book that, because of her death, would never be published.

Kilgallen targeted

"Denial of Justice" makes it clear that in the minds of those behind the assassination, Kilgallen had to be killed. She told people just before her death that she had evidence that would blow the JFK case wide open. Her fellow panelist on "What's My Line?" Random House publisher Bennett Cerf, had given her an advance on a book she was going to write about the assassination. Cerf read the book's preface the evening of her final "What's My Line?" episode before her death. He told people he was impressed by it.

She was murdered Nov. 8, 1965, a day before she was to travel to New Orleans, the home turf of crime boss Marcello, as she neared the end of her investigation.

A few hours after she died - but before police arrived - witnesses saw FBI men carrying files out of her Manhattan townhouse. Then again, the federal agents might actually have been members of the mob, Shaw allows. Either way, her notes and the file she was amassing on the JFK case were gone.

Another conspiracy theory? I know what some of you might be saying at this point - good grief, another JFK conspiracy theory? In the late 60s and most of the 70s, every crackpot was offering a theory about the assassination. The country went into conspiracy theory fatigue. Most people sensed that Oswald didn't act alone, but exactly who masterminded the assassination was anybody's guess - the Russians, Cubans, the mob, Lyndon Johnson were all suspects in the public mind. Shaw, a former attorney and author of 25 nonfiction books, backs up his claims in "Denial of Justice" with recorded interviews and primary source documents, like the transcript of the Ruby trial. He created a website, www.thedorothykilgallenstory.org, to host the recordings and documents he cited.

Palo Alto incident- While the JFK assassination is a morose topic, the book offers a bit of levity concerning a Palo Alto incident Shaw mentioned as part of the criminal history of the man he believes killed Kilgallen, Ohio newspaperman Ron Pataky. In 1954, Pataky - then a Stanford freshman - got drunk one night with a couple of friends who ended up at the Palo Alto bus station. They demanded that the bus driver let them on the bus, but he refused. Then a wine bottle was thrown at the front window of the bus, and the driver went to a phone booth to call police, but the phone had been ripped out by one of the drunken students. But police caught up to the three and arrested them. Shaw's first source about the incident was a clipping from the Stanford Daily archives. To flesh it out, he found one of Pataky's cohorts, none other than famed Bay Area criminal defense attorney Tony Serra. Serra, now 83, told Shaw that he met Pataky while the two played on the freshman Stanford football team.

Serra confirmed to Shaw that the three of them were arrested. "When the police did arrive, I hid between two buses and Pataky hid under a bus, but they found us," Serra told Shaw.

Pataky, who was involved in other incidents over the years, was never charged in Kilgallen's murder, though he's made a number of incriminating statements indicating that he knew her drink had been poisoned. - https://padailypost.com/2018/12/03/local-author-says-columnist-cracked-the-jfk-case-in-1965-just-before-she-was-murdered/

A former Jedi and a Jedi to be enter a bar. In their covert needs for transportation to elude the Galactic Empire (with whom they at war) they look to recruit a smuggler who will take them as "cargo" to a location they need to get to next and make the trip "without any imperial entanglements." A fee will be paid to the smuggler if one can be recruited to meet the Jedi needs.

And thus Hans Solo will become a part of the Rebellion. And the person about to become a Jedi who is joining the Rebellion seems to be am awfully good shot.

The Incom Corporation T-16 Skyhopper was equipped with an ion drive and a fully pressurized cockpit, allowing it to operate at trans-orbital altitudes.

Civilian versions of the skyhopper were armed with pneumatic cannons, and were equipped with targeting lasers though many law-enforcement agencies and planetary militaries throughout the galaxy utilized modified T-16s due to their overall good performance. However, because it was armed with only a single mounted repeating blaster, it was often overlooked by the military.

Even so, these airspeeders were often used as training vehicles by the Rebel Alliance, due to the fact that their flight controls were similar to those of X-wings. https://starwars.fandom.com/wiki/T-16_skyhopper/Legends#History

Scum and Villainy as fact - The CIA and the Outfit

Listen, the U.S. government is gonna help us and we're gonna help them."

"Help how? And besides, even if they do help how can you be sure of that?" His brother sighed and reached his hand into his trouser pocket, emerging with a small coin. He held it up between two fingers and said, "See this?"

"Yeah."

"Here, take a good look." He tossed it across the desk.

Chuck caught the coin and instantly realized it was old, ancient in fact. Mooney was always buying antiquities. He'd become quite a connoisseur of rare books, Dresden porcelain, and the like, so Chuck was only mildly intrigued. "Yeah, what's this supposed to "It's an old Roman coin, Chuck."

Chuck fingered the coin, turning it over again and again, and then tossed it back to his brother. "That's real nice, Mooney, but what the hell does it have to do with what we're talkin' about?"

Mooney leaned forward. "Look, this is one of the Roman gods. This one has two faces ... two sides.

That's what we are, the Outfit and the CIA... two sides of the same coin. Sometimes our government can't do shit on the up-and-up. Sometimes they need a little trouble somewhere or maybe they need some bastard taken care of. ... Jesus, they can't get caught doin' shit like that. What if people found out? But we can. Guns, a hit, muscle ... whatever dirty work needs to be done. We're on the same side, we're workin' for the same things ... we just look different. So ... we're two sides of the same coin. Right now we're workin' on Asia, Iran, and Latin America. Someday, Chuck, we'll be partners on everything. If you think we had Truman . let me tell you ... we got this deal sewn up. Ike, all he does is play golf."

"So that's what you like about the guy," Chuck teased.

"Shit, he's a pigeon . it's Nixon that's got the power. He's the one with the backing of the big money, like Hughes and the guys in California and the oilmen in Texas. ... Hump says Nixon's gonna call us if he needs a little hardball behind the scenes."

"Really. From now on, you can call me Sam Giancana, civil servant." He chuckled with pleasure and leaned back in the chair, putting his feet up on the desk. "We've got it made, Chuck."

"Okay, then, so what do you know about Guatemala? Don't go bullshittin' me, now, just to make a fuckin' point. Okay?"

Mooney laughed. "You're gettin to be a regular doubtin' Thomas, aren't you? How fuckin' long have you known me? Huh? How long? I just know how the real world works, that's all." He grinned sheepishly. "Well, maybe I do have an inside track on a few things." He leaned forward and lowered his voice.

"Our government wants an uprising in Guatemala but they need guns for a rebellion. And we supply 'em out of our guys down south."

"Why don't they just get the army to do that?"

A mortified look crossed Mooney's face. "Because then everybody would know what they're plannin' . .. that's why. This shit is top secret, Chuck. You hear what I'm sayin'? Top secret."

It had been decided, Mooney said, that the United States government, certain American investors, and the Outfit would "play both sides of the fence in Cuba"-sending arms and munitions to the rebels attempting to overthrow Batista while publicly backing the current ruler.

Joint Outfit/CIA involvement in international schemes wasn't without precedent, Mooney reminded Chuck. He'd helped former Chicago FBI agent-turned CIA man Bob Maheu with both a Saudi Arabian and Indonesian CIA operation before and-as if made-to-order-already had a smuggling operation set up out of Texas.

He'd worked with one agent or another over the years, he said, in the Middle East, Guatemala, and Asia, forming ties that came into action only when necessary. But when not needed for "patriotic" purposes, those ties served as potent protection for his illegal smuggling concerns. In exchange for his underworld services, Mooney said the CIA looked the other way-allowing over $ 100 million a year in illicit drugs to flow through Havana into the United States.

It was an arrangement similar to all the rest they'd made, he said. The CIA received 10 percent of the take on the sale of the narcotics, which they utilized "for their undercover slush fund." Such illegally earned monies were stashed away by the CIA in Swiss, Italian, Bahamian, and Panamanian accounts.

As the turbulence in Cuba had increased, it was only natural that the CIA would turn to its friends in the Outfit. Having invested millions in Havana, both parties stood to lose a great deal.

Mooney said he was putting everything in place. He'd sent Lewis McWillie to serve as pit boss of the Tropicana in Havana. McWillie was one of his soldiers from Texas, where he'd run guns south of the border as well as smuggling narcotics, and whom he said had previously worked with Jack Ruby and Frank Fiorini -aka Frank Sturgis. When McWillie wasn't working the casino, Mooney explained, he would be assisting Johnny Roselli with their smuggling operations. Roselli still spent a large portion of his time in Hollywood and Vegas, but now he often floated from city to city, representing Chicago-and Mooney -much as a diplomat might represent his country's leader.

Pulling off this new plan would be simple, Mooney said, flicking his cigar with confidence. "The black- market weapons will be supplied to the rebels by the CIA." He laughed and added, "But of course the CIA will buy them from the Outfit ... with money they've made from their other deals with us. After all, they can't take money out of their budget to support both Batista and the rebels ... how would that look to their fellow Americans? Anyway, we've got all the contacts for arms and we'll buy them with money we've skimmed from Hoffa and the Teamsters. We'll store them in a warehouse in Texas, then we'll ship or fly them to Cuba. The CIA I'II get us the planes and boats ... or I might try to set up a company to lease planes and boats to the government."

He took a sip of wine and continued, expressing his confidence that Ruby would get the job done in Texas. "He's worked with Trafficante and Marcello for me before on a few smuggling deals as a middleman with the cops and feds. Trafficante will oversee the operation for me. McWillie will team up with the CIA to deliver the guns to Roselli and one of Trafficante boys and another CIA agent who will get them to the rebels." "Beautiful," Chuck said.

Mooney beamed. "Yeah, beautiful." "Hey, maybe you'll get that government pension, after all," Chuck teased.

Think, now, and say whether you agree with me or not. Suppose a carpenter to be doing the business of a cobbler, or a cobbler of a carpenter; and suppose them to exchange their implements or their duties, or the same person to be doing the work of both, or whatever be the change; do you think that any great harm would result to the State?

Not much.

But when the cobbler or any other man whom nature designed to be a trader, having his heart lifted up by wealth or strength or the number of his followers, or any like advantage, attempts to force his way into the class of warriors, or a warrior into that of legislators and guardians, for which he is unfitted, and either to take the implements or the duties of the other; or when one man is trader, legislator, and warrior all in one, then I think you will agree with me in saying that this interchange and this meddling of one with another is the ruin of the State.

Most true.

Seeing then, I said, that there are three distinct classes, any meddling of one with another, or the change of one into another, is the greatest harm to the State, and may be most justly termed evil-doing? Precisely.

In the early forties, Meyer Lansky had possessed a vision for the dusty hole-in-the-wall town that was no more than a road stop with a diner and gas station. Las Vegas, Lansky believed, could become a glittering gambling mecca. After World War II, he convinced playboy mobster Bugsy Siegel to get things rolling. In short order, 6 million syndicate dollars were invested in the first Las Vegas casino-hotel, the Flamingo.

When it was discovered that the Flamingo's losses were due not to lack of business but to Siegel's rampant personal skimming, the collective order was given for his assassination. Chicago sent two soldiers to handle the job, and Siegel was murdered in Beverly Hills on June 20, 1947. Immediately, each city provided an emissary to take over the Flamingo, protect their interests, and pick up the pieces.

Chicago sent Gus Greenbaum, an old-time Capone man whose activities hailed back to the days of Prohibition. Greenbaum was a masterful gambling pro and virtuoso skimmer, as well as a trusted soldier who'd effectively handled the Trans-American wire service for Chicago in Arizona. Under Greenbaum, the Flamingo reported a $4 million profit his first year as manager; in reality, profits prior to Greenbaum's skimming on the Outfit's behalf had reached 15 million.

Initially, Cleveland's Moe Dalitz owned the Desert Inn, while Meyer Lansky controlled the Thunderbird. The profitable Dunes was held by a New England family. The Sands was run by Lansky and Costello, with actor George Raft and entertainer Frank Sinatra holding part interest. California and Cleveland families had a piece of the Stardust-but only after months of behind-the-scenes threats and legal wrangling and only until Mooney made his push and won the largest share. The Tropicana was held by Frank Costello and Phil Kastel of New York.

Chicago would ultimately rely on union funds- particularly those of the Teamsters-for its financial backing and controlled the Sahara, Riviera, and the garish neo-Roman Caesar's Palace.

After Marshall Caifano had been dispatched to Vegas by Mooney in 1953, others followed. Mooney sent Johnny Roselli early on to negotiate and muscle into other casinos; Johnny Formosa, his Indiana gambling lieutenant: Joe Pignatello, his first bodyguard-chauffeur; Gus Zappas and Jimmy James, both union henchmen; and Chicago bookie John Drew. They were all there with one purpose in mind: increase Chicago's piece of the action.

By 1958, Mooney's personal take from Vegas was over three hundred thousand a month. Just thinking about that much money made Chuck's heart skip. And it was only a small part of hundreds of deals that flooded into Mooney's hands; overall, he was bringing in $4 million a month, tax-free.

CHAPTER 17

After the Depression, unions had flourished in the United States, and Chicago-due to the brilliance of Murray Humphreys, in particular-was no exception. Of all the unions, the Teamsters were the shining star in Humphreys's crown. Like the film industry's Screen Actors Guild, which Chicago effectively controlled, theirs was a commodity with deadlines. If meat and produce didn't arrive at the stores, it spoiled. If shipments of equipment or machine parts didn't arrive, factories ground to a halt.

The power this gave the Teamsters was particularly impressive insofar as it offered the capability to target a specific business or industry. A shipment's speedy or late arrival could often mean the difference between success and failure in the U.S. climate of increased competition. Enterprises could be targeted by the Outfit for takeover, ruin, and bribery. Or conversely, if certain executives played ball with the union and Outfit muscle, their competition might begin to experience devastating shipping problems.

The sheer genius of such schemes hailed back to 1944, when Humphreys had placed a tough little Sicilian, Joey Glimco, in charge of Chicago's Teamsters. The five foot four, beak-nosed Glimco didn't let the Outfit down; Chicago's Teamsters' membership skyrocketed under his leadership as he forced the union into everything from egg workers and florists to bathroom sanitation workers. Over the next twenty years, others such as Dave Yaras, Lenny Patrick, Red and Allen Dorfman, and Irwin Weiner spun off their own "feeder" enterprises. Mooney told Chuck, that dozens of bogus companies-from resort and hotel development to health insurance and restaurants-were used by these men as fronts for schemes destined to bilk the Teamsters membership out of tens of millions of dollars. Most were created solely for the purpose of receiving immense loans from the Teamsters' pension fund. Once a loan had been made, the company quickly went bankrupt, bled dry by the Outfit.

With Dan Tobin's retirement as the International president, Chicago made sure a man they could do business with assumed offce. Dave Beck, a tough organizer from Seattle, came in to head the International. As Beck's right- hand man, the Outfit selected a like-minded Detroit thug, Jimmy Hoffa. In these two, they had the ideal partners for Glimco's continuing schemes.

After the heat on Dave Beck became too intense, it was time for a change, and in September of 195 7 , Chicago pushed Jimmy Hoffa to a sweeping victory as president of the International Teamsters. By October of that year, with their boy Hoffa at labor's helm, Murray Humphreys stroking the national politicians, and Mooney Giancana calling the shots, Chicago was the nation's star ascendant. The circle of power was complete.

Rather than a circle, though, Bobby Kennedy seemed to view organized crime's involvement in unions as a noose- one that mobsters had placed around the nation's throat, holding innocent people in its stranglehold. Consequently, during the McClellan committee hearings, he (RFK as Senate Legal Counsel) and his brother Jack (Senator JFK)grandstanded-grilling and fawning and mocking one witness after another. Jack Kennedy had lost to crimebuster Estes Kefauver in his bid for the vice-presidential nomination in 1955 and he seized on this opportunity to make a name for himself.

Sam "Mooney" Giacana, Robert Maheua, and Peter Lawford Howard Hughes and the FBI operation included using Marilyn Monroe who turned on the Outfit feeling "used" by them.

No wonder her diary was stolen when she was murdered. And RFK had never like anything related to the Outfit and their work for Nixon and the CIA around the world and inside the USA.

- Doublecross - By June of 1962, Marilyn's film career was losing momentum; she'd become unreliable and deeply troubled.

Early that summer, Mooney told Chuck he'd had a former FBI agent and a detective working on Marilyn's surveillance and in so doing had received a wealth of information about the starlet's habits, her emotional state, and stormy love life.

From what he'd learned, Mooney believed Marilyn's use to Chicago and the CIA was dwindling.

Later, Chuck would surmise that Marilyn Monroe's knowledge of CIA-Outfit collaborative efforts coupled with her increasingly severe emotional instability had become a dangerous combination. And that by July, thanks to a failing relationship with Bobby Kennedy, she had become not only expendable but-when Mooney received reports of her threats to Bobby Kennedy to "blow the lid off the whole damn thing"-a frightening liability, as well.

According to guys in the Outfit, it was at this time that the CIA, fearful of exposure by the vengeful, drug-addicted Monroe, requested that Mooney have her eliminated. And Mooney, smelling blood, seized on the CIA contract as a way to achieve another objective, as well. By murdering Monroe, it might be possible to depose the rulers of Camelot. One week before her death, a distraught Marilyn Monroe flew in to Lake Tahoe's Cal-Neva Lodge. Unbeknown to her, Mooney had orchestrated the invitation. Among the guests that weekend was a man Mooney jokingly referred to as "Peter the Rabbit" Lawford.

At dinner that evening, Mooney, Sinatra, and Lawford watched as Marilyn drank herself into near oblivion, pouring out her heart to an uncharacteristically sympathetic Mooney Giancana. She sobbed to Mooney that Bobby Kennedy had refused her phone calls-she'd even tried to reach him at his home in Virginia, something that sent the attorney general, recently hailed nationally as "Family Man of the Year," into a rage. She was obviously crushed by the possibility that she was, as she put it, "nothing more than a piece of meat" to the two brothers.

One thing that troubled him (Chuck Giacana) was that Mooney (Sam Giacana) actually thought he could control the United States government, actually work with the guys like undercover partners. Chuck thought Mooney was either crazy or he was really on to something. And at four o'clock in the morning, Chuck was too foggy-headed to know which. He turned it over again and again in his mind and finally came to the only logical conclusion: Mooney wasn't crazy; he had a tiger by the tail.

And he had to know a lot more than he was telling. God knows, he could be vague sometimes. The Outfit, Howard Hughes, Vice President Nixon, the FBI (J. Edgar Hoover), secret agents-it all sounded like some fucking spy story. And Chuck had a feeling the stakes were high, that a guy could pay with his life in a deal like this.

Remember the Spruce Goose?"

"Howard Hughes. Yeah, I remember him from the papers." "Roselli's been talkin' with him. He's one rich cocksucker. He knows how to play the game. ... He says he's got Vice President Nixon eatin' out of his hand. Military contracts, shit ... the guy's got Washington all paid off. And he knows how to make a buck. He likes Vegas ... likes the tables. I got a feelin' we can work together real nice."

"This is gettin' to be pretty big stuff, Mooney. What about the coppers? The IRS? You're talkin' about transportin' a lot of dough. Won't so much activity bring them down on the whole operation?"

"Fuck them. ... You know [Guy] Banister here, the Chicago FBI guy? And Bob Maheu? We know those guys real well.

Hughes knows all the feds. Murray Humphreys does, too. Roselli knows the government guys who work over in Asia.

We've been workin' with them in the Philippines for years now. Over the years, we've helped [Guy] Banister and [Robert] Maheu on a few deals, tippin' them off to car thieves and musclin' their favorite enemy"-Mooney laughed-"Commies." He leaned forward and lowered his voice, "The Outfit's gonna work with the FBI stateside, and outside of the country with the CIA. You can be sure they'll be on our side."

It was also no secret, according to Mooney, that Joe Kennedy-along with such industrialists as General Motors's founder William Crapo Durant, and John David Rockefeller, Jr.-had been given prior knowledge of the coming stock market crash in 1929. "In fact," Mooney told Chuck, "they made it happen. They figured out how they could get even richer. Shit, old man Kennedy made over a million bucks sellin' the market short before it fell. They manipulated the whole fuckin' thing." [Biographers claim JK Sr. was not a bootlegger but invested in above board liquor companie[s] with the understanding prohibition would be repealed and the business worth would incresase then.]

The thirties were good to Kennedy. Mooney said Joe used the leverage gained from obtaining campaign contributions for FDR-one hundred thousand dollars from Chicago and New York alone-to win an appointment from Roosevelt as chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

And four years later, in 1938 (when King Edward VII resigned about that time), FDR gave him the coveted ambassadorship to England in exchange for a similar amount.

According to Mooney, as the forties gave way to the fifties, Kennedy tried to distance himself from his old cronies by selling Somerset Imports and his interest in the racetrack at Hialeah. Initially, Mooney said, that had been fine. "We liked it that way. He was a guy on the inside and he owed us big.

We didn't care if he wanted to play high-and-mighty ... as long as we could work with the guy ... because if there ever was a crook, it's Joe Kennedy."

Joe had called on Mooney once before, regarding a distasteful little problem his son Jack had gotten into. A marriage needed to be annulled and Joe didn't want any publicity-in fact, not only did he want the marriage annulled, he also wanted any record of it completely removed from all legal documents. Once this was accomplished, Jack-his slate clean once more-could get on with his father's political agenda.

The job required discretion and a man who knew how to get things done. Mooney directed Johnny Roselli to handle the legalities for Kennedy, and that was the end of that.

Most recently, Mooney's friend and longtime Kennedy mentor Frank Costello had had a major falling-out with the Irishman. The rupture had been building due to Joe's increasingly fierce reluctance to return favors to his former pals. Costello rightfully believed the Mob had helped make Kennedy a rich and powerful man, and now when he'd called in a marker, the Irish bastard had not only balked, he'd ignored him. It was easy to understand why there was a contract out on Joe Kennedy. - Doublecross

Flirting with Marilyn

An Indonesian friend tipped me off that the Jakarta Biennale, staged at the TIM arts centre in Menteng, was worth checking out.

Held in the centre's cavernous, concrete underground carpark, the event felt rather infra-dig but what it lacked in sophistication, it made up for in inclusiveness. Consistent with TIM's philosophy, the arrangement kept costs down, allowed greater participation by poorer artists and visitors, and offered more scope for expression than a conventional gallery because artists could let their hair down and not worry about making a mess.

Two exhibits - from opposite ends of the artistic spectrum - caught my eye.

One was a product of, shall we say, the symbolic, abstract school. At first I didn't realise it was an installation and went to walk around it thinking the pipes strapped to the concrete ceiling of the carpark had leaked their fecal contents onto the floor.

The exhibit comprised three puddles of blue coloured water lying on the drab surface of the concrete basement. As the liquid dried along its shallow edges, it changed colours from a dark wet blue that glistened and reflected shapes, including those of people passing by, to blues of various shades. Flat and powdery, the result looked to me like one of the vast inland salt lakes of central Australia that one flies over en route to Jakarta. What it was meant to say I am not sure, but it fascinated in the way the liquid colours of a lava lamp do.

The second exhibit was from the realist school, or what I took to be such. It comprised a number of large black and white photographs whose subject matter, unlike "blue puddles," was immediately intelligible, though also provocative and charged with mystery.

Two photos, each of which elicited a hushed, almost disbelieving, wow despite myself, caught my eye.

The first showed Sukarno, modern Indonesia's founding father, at a cocktail party chatting animatedly with three of the world's most famous women: Marilyn Monroe, Elizabeth Taylor and Jackie Kennedy (Onassis). Sukarno is in his element and looks excited. Smiling broadly, every inch a gentleman officer in his crisp uniform, his famous magnetic charisma on full beam, he has the complete attention of the intrigued women, each of them in her prime. The electrical current, however, flows most strongly between Sukarno and Monroe. The other two superstars are mere accessories.

The second photo took the scene just described a step further. It is an intimate close-up of the President and the goddess alone. Monroe was 29 at the time. She is wearing a neck high but skin tight dress of the kind made for her by Orry-Kelly, the famous Australian celebrated in Hollywood for his costume designs. Sukarno looks appreciative. Monroe is leaning her blonde head close to hear what he is saying.

So engrossing were the photos that I did not pay much attention to the statement pinned to the wall beside them. My initial reaction on reading it was to feel angry and let down. It announced that the series, called "Sejarah X" (History X), was a selection of photos taken by a fictional photographer named Amrizal Chaniago between 1959 and 1964. Amrizal, went the note, had graduated from his modest studio in Jakarta to become the official presidential photographer and a "witness to history." He in turn was the creation of Agan Harahap, who is real! Agan's specialty is historical fantasy; analogous to the historical novel, his work delights in embellishing fact.

Turning back to the photos and leaning forward to examine them more forensically, my anger (more likely embarrassment at being sucked in) was replaced by wonder at the cleverness of Agan's work. Though montages, the multiple images Agan had cut and paste into a single image were totally seamless and convincing. They also rang true because their content fitted everybody's perception of Sukarno, the playboy. This is genuine artistry, I decided. This is how it would have been.

The montages are from a few years apart. The first is based on a visit by Sukarno to the US around 1961 when the Kennedy administration feted him in a bid to turn around his pro-communist and anti-US tendencies. It didn't work. He went on to the Soviet Union which turned on an even more lavish reception and awarded him the Lenin Peace Prize.

The second is based on a cocktail party hosted in Beverly Hills for Sukarno in late May 1956. Gregory Peck and Ronald Reagan were also thought to have been there but Agan has not bothered making photos of Sukarno with these stars. He has played with the fact that Sukarno was a big fan of US movies (he had a cinema installed in his presidential palace to watch them) and had made it known he wanted to meet Marilyn Monroe while he was in the US.

Though montages, the photos have taken in lots of Indonesians because they look so real and depict exactly what they would have expected of Sukarno. They continue to spark gosip selebriti. Did the CIA set up the encounter? Was Marilyn Monroe a CIA agent? Did they spend the night together? Is it true that she referred to him as a prince? That she said she had never heard of Indonesia and thought he was from India? That later, following assassination attempts on Sukarno, she offered him asylum in New York but Arthur Miller wasn't keen?

Whatever the answers to these breathless speculations, it is universally agreed that Sukarno was an incorrigible flirt. He had nine wives. In his own words, Sukarno liked looking at beautiful women “not just out of the corner of his eye but with all his eyes,” behaviour Indonesians call mata keranjang (basket eyes, like a shopper).

Some think the trait is also a good metaphor for his politics. He flirted with the Japanese during World War II, with leadership of the third world, with democracy, with brinkmanship, with revolution, and with the communist bloc. Like his personal liaisons, they ended in failure. In 1966, he was impeached (though, it should be stressed, by a Soeharto controlled Parliament wanting to legitimise the new regime’s hold on power) for supporting the Indonesian communist party, neglecting the economy and contributing to “moral degradation” through blatant womanising.

Both personalities, however, are too big to be easily pigeon-holed.

Marilyn Monroe, branded the quintessential dumb blonde, has recently been the subject of new research based on her diaries, notebooks and poetry. She was “a frustrated thinker” with a “complex subjectivity cooped up in an over-objectified body,” writes Andy Martin. In his Prayer for Marilyn Monroe, the Nicaraguan priest-poet Ernesto Cardenal points his finger at “the studio bosses of 20th Century-Fox” for her fate.

Sukarno too remains larger than life. He is loved and revered in contemporary Indonesia. Whatever his failures, they are so many peccadilloes compared with his status as the founding father of the nation and huge persona. To his multitudes of fans, his wildest ideas, up to and including space exploration by Indonesia and setting up an alternative UN, demonstrate not megalomania but his love and ambitions for Indonesia.

A restaurant I visited near the Monas national monument said it all. One whole wall, side to side and top to bottom, was covered in a huge collage of black and white photos of Bung Karno in his many poses and roles. On another wall his image was cheek by jowl with Mao, Gandhi, Beethoven, JFK, Yasser Arafat, Marx and Mother Teresa.

Thanks to Pat Walsh for his generous contribution of this article from his fantastic book, Stormy With a Chance of Fried Rice: Twelve Months in Jakarta. Available at Gramedia, online from Gramediana or at Ganesha in Bali.
